Restrictions Placed On PDS Ice Rink's Hours of Operation

The Regional Planning Board last Thursday night voted to impose various restrictions on the operation of the Princeton Day School ice rink in an effort to meet neighbors' concerns about noise and traffic.

The school is in the process of rebuilding its 29-year-old rink, for which it has already received preliminary and final major site plan approval from the Planning Board. The Board, however, asked in April that school officials return with operational information and an explanation of the rink's usage by outside groups.

The proposed new ice rink, estimated to cost $2.5 million, will be approximately the same size and in the same location as the existing rink. Made of metal, it will be enclosed on all sides and will contain a refreshment center, meeting room, pro shop, office, changing rooms, varsity team rooms and rest rooms. Seating is limited to 200, both permanent and temporary.

PDS had requested that the skating season be permitted to run from October 1 to April 30 (an extension of a month at both ends from its current schedule); that a summer session, lasting no more than four weeks, be permitted; and that the hours of operation during the skating season be 6 a.m. until 11 p.m.(8 a.m. to 7 p.m. during the four-week summer session).

The two primary non-school users

DRESSING FOR UNITY DAY: Rocky Means, 5, Ryan Means, 9, and Landis Christopher Hackett, 1½, try on their cultural clothing in preparation for the Unity Day Parade and Picnic. Sponsored by the Princeton Task Force on Ethics, the event will run from 2 to 6 p.m. on Sunday, September 21. Those interested in marching in the parade should meet at the Princeton University Gates at 1:45 p.m. See story on page 5.

School Board Considers Change to Make Meetings More Accessible and Effective

At the first board meeting of the 1997-98 academic year on September 9, Princeton Regional Schools Board of Education President Jack Marrero reiterated a suggestion he had made in the spring – that the board form an Institute for Educational Reform.

The "Institute" would sponsor two community forums annually for a discussion of trends in oducation, he said.

While his suggestion garnered little support, it was obvious that a kind of "reform" was on board members' minds, as they debated changes in their mode of operation that would make the board more effective, as well as more responsive to the public.

It started when Vice President Michael Littman, chair ol the Finance Committee, noted that Comcast Cable had approached the board with the suggestion of televising board meetings on the public cable network.

Such a venture would require new equipment, costing approximately $20,000, Mr. Littman pointed out. He recommended that the district borrow equipment and televise meetings on a trial basis. If the venture proved popular, the district could later invest in equipment, he said.

He moved that the district attempt TV broadcasting on a trial basis for meetings in November and December, and re-evaluate the situation at the end of the year.

"I'm not sure it's a good idea," protested David Robbins. "Have other boards found television beneficial? What conclusions could we draw from a trial?"

"What would be the basis ol our evaluation?" added board member Steve Carson.

Bill Persons suggested that the board approach the trial in a "lighthearted" manner. "We might find out the public feels it is worse to televise board proceedings than not to know what happens at all!" he said. "We owe it to the larger audience to give it a shot, however."

Business Administrator Dan Swirsky volunteered to ask the New Jersey School Boards Association for information concerning the pros and cons ol board television coverage.

At that point, Mr. Carson proposed that the matter be tabled until the meeting ol September 23, at which Dr. Swirsky could report his findings. Board members voted 4-4 to table; and Mr. Littman withdrew his original motion.

Borough-Based Centurion Ministries Crusades Quietly for Innocent Prisoners

Watching a person be executed for a crime he clearly didn't commit is the sort of thing that can make a man lose his religion. But Jim McCloskey has done it twice, and his faith remains strong.

Mr. McCloskey is the founder of the Princeton-based Centurion Ministries, which has as its slogan: "Seeking justice for the innocent in prison." Since 1980, when he took a year off from his studies at Princeton Theological Seminary to pursue the case of a man wrongly convicted of murder, Mr. McCloskey has been living by that motto with the single-mindedness of a hunter and the tenacity of a bulldog.

Working out of a Nassau Street office crammed with computers and file boxes, Mr. McCloskey, with a staff of three and a small corps ol volunteers, has over the years managed to free 25 men from prison. Without exception, they have all been serving life sentences or awaiting execution. They had served an average of 18 to 20 years each, for crimes they did not commit.

Twice, in 1987 and 1992, he has

Princeton Is Location For Walk for Diabetes

This September and October, more than 2500 area residents will gather at nine locations throughout New Jersey, including Princeton University. They will call their friends, neighbors and coworkers, gather sponsors and donations and slip on their sneakers to raise funds for the American Diabetes Association, walking together as part of the seventh annual "Walktoberfest," America's Walk for Diabetes.

Sponsored by the New Jersey affiliate of the American Diabetes Association, America's Walk for Diabetes will take place Sunday, September 28; Saturday, October 4; and Sunday, October 5, with check-in at 8:30 a.m.

All walks will conclude with lunch and festivities. The event is expected to raise more than $300,000 for research to find a cure for this serious disease.

Each year, more than 625,000 Americans are diagnosed with diabetes, the fourth-leading cause of death by disease in America. The disease kills more people than either AIDS or breast cancer. More than 178,000 Americans will die from its complications during this year alone.

For more information on America's Walk for Diabetes call the American Diabetes Association at 1-800-254-WALK (9255).

Fatherhood Institute CEO To Address Family Concern

Charles A. Ballard, founder, president, and CEO of the Institute for Responsible Fatherhood and Family Revitalization, will speak on "The Status of Fatherhood in America: How Do We Return Fathers to Families?" at Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs on Tuesday, September 23, at 4:30 p.m. in Robertson Hall, Bowl 5.

Founded by Mr. Ballard in 1982 in Cleveland as a local grassroots program, the institute is considered a model fathering program, dedicated to encouraging fathers to become involved in the lives of their children in a loving, compassionate, and nurturing way. With its home-based outreach program, the institute has restored more than 3,000 fathers to their families.

Fathers who might otherwise join the ranks of "deadbeat dads" find role models among the institute's outreach workers, from whom they learn the skills of modern-day fatherhood. Now based in Washington, D.C., the nonprofit organization has opened centers in Milwaukee, San Diego, Nashville, Tenn., and Yonkers, N.Y.

Mr. Ballard's own young adult life could have served as a case study for the institute. At age 17, he fathered a child but abandoned the boy and his mother, joining the armed forces to avoid his responsibilities. Drugs and alcohol followed, as well as prison time for a crime he says he did not commit.

While in prison, Mr. Ballard had plenty of time to think about his son and decided to care for the boy when he was released. He eventually adopted his son, earned a high school diploma, an undergraduate degree, and then a master's degree in social welfare. In 1976, while working at a hospital, he observed that numerous women were having babies out of wedlock, with the fathers nowhere to be found. He gathered the names of nearly 600 fathers who had abandoned their children, then visited and counseled the men. From that simple beginning, Ballard's institute grew into a national organization.

Mr. Ballard's talk is being sponsored by the Woodrow Wilson School.

How-to Course Offered For Would-be Citizens

It will meet at 7:30 p.m. on October 16 and will be taught by David Oakley, a Princeton lawyer whose specialties include immigration law.

Another new course, "What's Love Got to Do With It?" on Thursdays at 7:30 will involve group discussion on the content, forms and styles of selections from a collection of New Yorker short stories by authors such as Gabriel Garcia Marquez, Vladimir Nabokov, Alice Adams and others. Carolyn Farrington, a prize-winning author of short stories who currently teaches writing and literature at The College of New Jersey will be the instructor.

STEERING A COURSE FOR AIDS AWARENESS: Nancy Cosentino, The Rev. Carl D. Reimers and Susan Levy head up a steering committee planning a Garden Party for AIDS Awareness. The event, to be held Sunday, September 28, will raise money for the tenth anniversary of The National Aids Memorial. Eighty-five percent of all contributions is donated to non-political organizations and projects devoted to AIDS/HIV education, prevention and pastoral care nationwide. The remaining 15 percent maintains the memorial shrine at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City, which contains a book of names listing over 5,000 men, women and children who have died of AIDS. More Delays Possible in Borough Hall Renovation Project

Three of the six members of Borough Council appear hesitant at going forward now with the Borough Hall renovation project, at least as it has been presented to date. The numbers are important because bonding the additional monies needed for the $3.8 million project requires the vote of four members of Council. Approximately $700,000 more will have to bonded before the Borough can award the contract.

At last Tuesday night's meeting, Council did vote to go ahead with preparation of the bid specifications. But Sandra Starr, Roger Martindell, and David Goldberg all had questions about the building and about the process leading to its ultimate approval.

Mr. Goldfarb said there was a whole list of other things he was concerned about, such as finishes, and that he wanted to see cost estimates. "I don't want to be spending a lot of money," he said. "This requires that I examine how we are going to do the trim and specify items so we can do it as inexpensively as possible."

TOPICS Of the Town

Ms. Starr said she wanted to see written specifications and samples. Mr. Goldfarb added that he felt he had to stop the process at every point to make sure he was comfortable with it.

The Public Works Committee spent a lot of time on carpeting and furniture years ago when the project began, and the committee could review this again quickly, said Mark Freda.

"I know Mr. Morrow's work. He is very skilled and will specify material that will last, and he will not spend too much money," Mr. Freda added.

Off-White & Pastel

Paul Morrow, the project's architect, described the building's interior elements. The walls, he said, will be almost entirely paint on gypsum wallboard. Interior colors will be off white, with pastels in niches and alcoves to create some visual richness. No wall coverings are planned. Millwork will be medium-grade high-pressure laminate. Cabinets will be particle board, and door fronts will be birch.

Mr. Martindell asked if the drawings were cast in stone. "They are not," said Mr. Morrow. "But they are what you have asked for."

On Friday, Mr. Martindell said he was not trying to micromanage the project, but that it was going too slowly. "We don't have a system by which we develop our capital projects."

The key vote is the bonding vote, he added. "This won't be taken until a majority of Council members sign off on the project. It might take two weeks to two to three months."

Mr. Martindell said there were any number of things that had not been voted on by Council, such as the color scheme of the building. "I have no idea what it is. I wouldn't buy a house if I didn't like the color."

On April 23 of this year, Mr. Martindell and Ms. Starr called a press conference to announce they had changed their position and would vote to move forward with the renovation of Borough Hall. They said that most of their concerns had been addressed by Mr. Morrow.

Support Was Signalled

"Since Mayor and Council began the first full review of the project in January of this year, we have made substantial improvements in the project," Ms. Starr said during the press conference. "We believe that the time is now right to signal our support."

They did say, however, that they would not vote on bonding the additional $700,000 until the bids came back. According to Borough Administrator Thomas Shannon, there is a time limit of 60 days between receipt of the bids and award of the project, and that the money must be in place when the project is awarded.

A renovated Borough Hall would be brought up to fire, electrical, construction, and energy codes, and would comply with the federal Americans With Disabilities Act.

The building would be made completely accessible to the disabled, who would use a new elevator in the back of the structure. The current wheelchair ramp in the front of Borough Hall would be removed.

Borough Hall would also get a new roof, electrical system, and heating, ventilating, and air conditioning system. About 2,500 square feet of additional space would be created, and the interior would be reconfigured into handicapped-accessible work areas.

Ass't Superintendent Search Raises Questions

The search for a replacement for Princeton Regional Schools assistant superintendent Cheryl Simone has raised questions in some board members' minds about the district's recruiting process.

At the board's regular meeting on September 9, Schools Superintendent Marcia Bossart said she would like to announce an appointment by October 28. "There is no closure yet," she declared. "The closing date for applications is September 30."

Advertisements for a replacement for Dr. Simone, whose contract was not renewed in the spring, first appeared in local newspapers and educational journals in late July, although Dr. Simone will remain with the district through December 31. Had her contract been renewed, she would have automatically received tenure.

Board member Therese Flaherty said she felt "very uncomfortable" with the number of times the Board interviewed candidates. So much time has elapsed between the original advertisements and the final interviews, she said, that many good candidates have certainly found employment elsewhere.

Board Vice President Michael Littman said time was required for matters to be processed through the Personnel Committee. One of his concerns, he noted, was that the "minority hiring yield is not great.

"It is very important," he emphasized, "that we allow adequate time to get a good group of qualified minority candidates in the pool."

"I still think the committee should review the entire process," insisted Ms. Flaherty.

"You have a right to hire and fire as you choose," declared a member of the audience, during the public comment period, "but you have a responsibility to do it in public."

Dr. Bossart said she was planning to form an advisory committee to seek input from teachers, parents, administrators, and board members on the appointment of a new assistant superintendent.

The district Personnel Committee is scheduled to meet September 22, to discuss the formation of the advisory committee. Its members will probably interview finalists, Dr. Bossart added.

Rickey and Robinson Topics of Discussion

A panel discussion entitled, "Remembering Branch Rickey and Jackie Robinson" to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the integration of major league baseball will be held on Tuesday, September 23, at 7:30 p.m. in 50 McCosh Hall at Princeton University.

The speakers will be Branch B. Rickey, grandson of the Brooklyn Dodgers executive Branch Rickey; Sharon Robinson, daughter of the Dodgers star Jackie Robinson; and Roger Kahn, whose The Boys of Summer, about the old Brooklyn Dodgers team has become a classic.

The event is being organized by Professor Arnold Rampersad, whose book Jackie Robinson: A Biography will be published this month. The moderator will be Sean Wilentz, professor of history and director of the Program in American Studies.

The Program in American Studies, the Program in African-American Studies, and the Department of Athletics of Princeton University will co-sponsor the event.

Pl. Board Coordinator Awarded Certification.

Ilene Cutroneo, administrative coordinator at the Princeton Regional Planning Board, has received a land use administrator certification. This requires completion of specified land use courses from the Center of Government Services at Rutgers University.

In addition, there is a requirement for employment in the land use field for a minimum of five years.

This is the first year of this program, and six certifications will be awarded by Rutgers. They will be presented in November at the League of Municipalities Convention.

Ms. Cutroneo has been employed by the Princeton Regional Planning Board since July 1994. She had previously been with the Franklin Township Planning Board from 1986 to 1994.

She has been a member of the New Jersey Planning and Zoning Administrators (NJPZA) since 1987 and served as central regional director from 1992 to 1994.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

By Tod Peyton

THE BANK OF MOM AND DAD

Escalating home prices often cause many first-time buyers to seek help from their families for the down payment on a new home. If your parents are providing financial assistance for the purchase of a home, it is important that you have very clear agreements with them about the conditions under which their help will be provided.

Sit down with your parents to discuss the details of the arrangement. Is the money they are providing a gift or a loan? If it is a gift, be sure to check with your tax expert to minimize the tax implications. If your parents are loaning the money for the down payment, how will it be paid back? Will there be joint ownership with an equity-sharing agreement? Will your parents be named on the ownership papers with you? Are special documents needed?

Whatever form it takes, parents who help their children buy a home give them an incredible gift!

Dedication On Saturday For Mercer Island Park

The Garden Club of Princeton has announced that Mercer Island Park will be dedicated on Saturday, September 20, at 10:30 a.m. The park is located at Nassau and Mercer Streets.

The Rev. Carl D. Reimers will offer prayers at 10:30. Afterwards there will be remarks by Martha S. Sword, president of The Garden Club of Princeton, and Borough Mayor Marvin Reed.

Music will be supplied by Jersey Transit and The Blawenburg Band. Refreshments will follow The Stor Spangled Bonner.

In December 1996 Borough Council voted to allocate approximately $60,000 toward the renovation of the small park. The contribution consisted of about half in money and the rest in in-kind services.

The Borough's contribution was given to the Garden Club, which hired the landscape architectural firm of Louise Schiller Associates. The club has raised the remaining funds.

The Garden Club of Princeton was formed at a meeting on June 15, 1911. Of the first 18 members, 11 were wives of Princeton University professors. Every member was responsible for writing a paper on some phase of gardening and reading this to her fellow members during one of the 12 yearly meetings.

When World War I began in 1914, the club began to hold flower markets to raise money for various causes. The markets were patterned on those in Paris and this gave rise to the name, "French Market," which continues to this day.

For more than 80 years, the markets have been held on Friday mornings in the spring and fall, offering fresh flowers from members' gardens.

The small area, now known as Mercer Island Park, has long been the site of the French Market. In its new, refurbished state it will continue to fill that role.

Uniting Diverse Princeton Is Goal of Parade, Picnic

The Princeton Task Force on Ethics is inviting all area residents to participate in the Unity Day Parade and Picnic fourth annual celebration of diversity in the Princeton community, scheduled for the afternoon of Sunday, September 21.

"This event is designed to bring together people of all ages, races, and creeds," said Richard Caran, chairman of Unity Celebration. "We would like to extend an invitation to all Princetonians to march in the parade and to bring a dish reflecting their cultural heritage to the picnic. In breaking bread together, we hope to break down some of those invisible walls which divide our community."

The parade, featuring the Mayors of Princeton, some of Princeton's oldest citizens, a calliope, the Princeton Volunteer Fire Department, and various community groups, will begin at 2 p.m. on the corner of Nassau Street and University Place and will continue down Witherspoon, Leigh, and John streets to end in Community Park South. Residents are encouraged to wave and cheer along the route, and then join in.

At approximately 3 p.m., a community potluck picnic will be in Community Park South under the pavilion. The picnic will feature Greg Merkle, a local guitarist, and other musical entertainment. There will be games, face-painting,

U.S. Attorney to Speak On Community Justice

Faith Hochberg, U.S. Attorney for New Jersey, will give a lecture entitled "The Evolution of Community. Justice Within the American Judicial System" at Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs on Thursday, September 25, at 4:30 p.m. in Robertson Hall, Bowl 5.

Ms. Hochberg, a well-known New Jersey prosecutor, was named U.S. Attorney in 1994, replacing Michael Chertoff. She established her reputation by prosecuting a number of headline-making cases, including a 1995 shooting at a Montclair post office that left two postal employees dead. She has been a central figure in the negotiations surrounding the prosecution of Theodore Kaczynski, the alleged "Unabomber."

Kaczynski will be prosecuted first in California, but due to Ms. Hochberg's efforts, the U.S. Justice Department may bring another indictment against him in New Jersey for the 1994 bombing death of Thomas Mosser of West Caldwell.

Ms. Hochberg's lecture is sponsored by the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs.

Princeton Adult School Features 19th Century

A lecture series that reviews the effects of certain 19th-century developments and notables on the 20th-century world and a one-session course on how to obtain U.S. citizenship are among the new courses in the Princeton Adult School's current fall term.

"The 20th Century: Shaping the World We Know" deals with a wide range of topics, from the rule of the British in India to Charles Darwin and evolutionary biology, and the development of spoken communication technology.

The series is named the Anne B. Shepherd Lecture in honor of a longtime member of the Adult School Board who coordinated the lecture series until she died last year.

The series will begin at 8 p.m. Tuesday, October 7, with "Manet in Paris," a lecture delivered by Beth Brombert, author of the recent, acclaimed biography of the 19th-century French painter, Edouard Manet: Rebel in a Frock Coat.

On October 14, Deborah Nord, professor of English and director of the program in women's studies at the University, will speak on "Detestable Publicity: Careers of Victorian Women Novelists."

"Before the Beep: The Long History of 'Voice Mail'" will follow on October 21. The presentation will deal with the growth of oral communication development, including the telephone, sound films, and more. The speaker will be Thomas Levin, associate professor of Germanic languages and literature at the University.

After a hiatus on October 28, the series will resume November 4, with "Conrad's Heart of Darkness. The Partition of Africa," a lecture on the colonial powers' dominance of Africa. Robert Tignor, professor of modern and contemporary history at the University will present the topic.

Carl Schorske, professor of history emeritus at the University, and a celebrated teacher and author, will examine a temporary throwback in English culture in a lecture entitled "Back to the Future: England's Medieval Revival and Its Modern Meaning," on November 11

In a November 18 lecture entitled "The Raj," Princeton University history professor Gyan Prakash will examine India under British rule, which many Americans know mostly from novels and TV's "The Jewel in the Crown."

In "Darwin: Voyages, Discoveries and Evolution," scheduled for November 25, the speaker will be Rosemary Grant, senior research scholar at Princeton's Department of Ecology and Evolutionary Biology.

She and her husband, University Professor Peter Grant, conducted the research on which the prize-winning book, "The Beak of the Finch," was based.

The fee for the entire series is $50. Admission to individual lectures may be purchased at the door of the Princeton High School Auditorium for $8.

Woman Stung For $12,200 In Confidence Scam

A 52-year-old Borough woman withdrew $2,000 in cash from her bank account and handed it over along with $10,200 in jewelry to a pair of con artists who stopped her on the corner of Madison and Wiggins streets Thursday afternoon at 12:30. They had promised her a share in a bagful of money they claimed to have found.

According to police, one of the suspects, described as a thin, 5'6 black woman in her late 40's, approached the victim claiming that she had just discovered a black, zippered pouch. They were immediately joined by the second suspect, a 5'5 black male, of medium build, believed to be in his mid 40's.

The three opened the pouch, revealing what appeared to be a large sum of money. They agreed to split the money between them, after each of the three pledged some "up-front cash."

The victim withdrew the cash from her bank, and the suspects then drove her to her home, where she retrieved the jewelry. They then drove her to Palmer Square. At approximately 3 p.m., she was directed to enter an office building and meet with an associate of the first suspect.

She entered the building, but could not locate the individual. Going back outside, she discovered that the two suspects, with her cash and jewelry, were gone.

Marijuana Arrest

Two individuals were arrested on charges of possession of marijuana, after a patrol officer noticed them smoking marijuana in the Park Place parking lot Saturday night.

Bonnie A. Ritterman, 44, of Dregher, Pa., and Roy C. Brotman, 43, of Parlin, were released with complaint summonses.

Police arrested Anawa Wacaba, 25, whose last known address is 16 Vandeventer Avenue, on charges of harassment, improper behavior, and consuming alcohol in a public park Saturday evening.

Police were called to Community Park South at 5 p.m., when it was reported that a man there was shouting obscenities at children.

On the scene, officers found that Mr. Wacaba had "harassed and intimidated" a number of people at the park, and he was arrested. He was due to appear in court on Tuesday afternoon.

Multiple Minors Arrested For Alcohol Possession

Four University students were arrested at 9:01 p.m. Wednesday, after a police officer found them in possession of alcohol on Olden Street.

The officer saw one of the students place five six-packs of beer in the trunk of a car. Waiting in the car, he noticed, were three other students who appeared to be under age. He investigated and charged one student, 21-year-old Cliff Barber, with providing alcohol to minors. The other three were also arrested, and were charged with being minors in possession of alcohol. They are: Neal Desai, 19; Andrew Cohen, 18; and Michael Newman, 20.

All three were released, pending a court appearance.

Police arrested two men for being minors in possession of alcohol early Friday morning. During a traffic stop on Harrison Street at 1:27 a.m., the arresting office found two six-packs of beer in the car in which the suspects were traveling.

David Greeley, 20, of Parlin, and James Molnar, 20, of Plainsboro, were both charged with possession of alcohol and released pending a court appearance.

Four 19-year-old University students were arrested and charged with being minors in possession of alcohol a week ago Tuesday, after an officer spotted them walking down Nassau Street carrying a number of bottles of wine and cider.

Arrested were Page Pearcy, of Gauss Hall; Lauren Harrison, of Blair Hall, and Ashley Fay and Kristin Janson, both of 1922 Hall.

All four were released on their own recognizance, pending a court appearance.

Police charged a John Street man with purchasing alcoholic beverages for a minor Saturday night, after an officer on Lytle Street observed him hand a six-pack of beer to a 16-year-old boy.

Juan Anjel Martinez, 29, was released with a complaint summons. The juvenile was released to an adult family member.

Vandalism Reports

A Hamilton Avenue resident reported two windows shattered by vandals, who threw oranges through them on Thursday night at approximately 6 p.m.

The vandals, identified only as two white males and one black male, were seen running from the scene.

Three juveniles were taken into custody for trespassing on the roof of a Borough office building Thursday evening at 6:18 p.m.

A 12-year-old Township resident, and two 13-year-old Borough residents, were charged with juvenile delinquency and released to their families.

In an act of criminal mischief, an unidentified person knocked a 3' X 5' glass window out of a new Jersey Transit bus-stop shelter near the corner of Harrison Street and Franklin Avenue.

The glass was shattered. No replacement cost was available.

Cleaner Air in Sight

Under new state regulations adopted September 15, buses and heavy trucks registered in New Jersey will be required to undergo annual emissions inspection tests.

Diesel-burning trucks and buses will be pulled over for on-the-spot checks beginning next month. Those that do not comply with the state standards will be subject to fines.

The inspection will apply to about 270,000 heavy trucks registered in the state, while all out-of-state trucks driven here will be subject to the roadside checks.

Diesel soot, the biggest source of particulate pollution in the state, contains fine particles that are easily inhaled. They are an irritant in the lungs and a "probable human carcinogen," according to David West, the state Department of Environmental Protection chief of air transportation control.

State officials hope the new regulations will reduce the amount of particulate in the air by about 30 percent over the next several years.

No Gubernatorial Endorsement

The New Jersey chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW) will not endorse either gubernatorial candidate in this year's governor's race.

The reason, according to officials, is the record of both candidates on welfare reform. Governor Christine Whitman never fulfilled a campaign promise to change a state law denying cash benefits to women who have children while on welfare.

Governor Whitman's opponent, Senator Jim McGreevey, D-Woodbridge, supported the measure denying assistance.

The NOW position on welfare reform pre-empts evaluation of the candidates' positions on any other issues, including affirmative action or laws protecting women's health.

$90 Million Settlement

Rent-A-Center stores, which operates nationwide and has a store in Ewing, could owe as much as $90 million to 78,000 customers who were overcharged when they leased furniture, television sets and stereo equipment, according to a Camden County Superior Court ruling.

The ruling covers consumers who have leased equipment since 1988 and stems from an April 1994 lawsuit filed by a Glassboro woman, who claimed she was deceived and overcharged.

Camden County Superior Court Judge E. Stevenson Fluharty ruled in January that the company charged Robinson "unconscionable fees and interest" and violated the state's consumer fraud laws by not making credit terms clear.

The lawsuit filed in New Jersey is one of at least four nationwide accusing Rent-a-Center of violating consumer fraud laws. Similar suits are proceeding in federal courts in Philadelphia and in Wisconsin.

A class-action suit filed in Minnesota in 1995 resulted in the award of damages of $23-$34 million against the company.

Bad Checks Passed At Local Businesses

Borough police reported three cases of bad checks being passed at area businesses over the past several months.

A University Place store was victimized by an unidentified woman who, between August 8 and August 11, passed $1,270.46 worth of bad checks there. She used the checks to purchase unidentified merchandise.

The suspect is described as a white female in her late 20's or early 30's. She is approximately 5'5 with shoulder-length light frosted hair, and long eyelashes.

On August 8, a woman fitting the above description used a bad check to purchase $153.99 worth of goods at a Nassau Street store specializing in women's lingerie.

Both incidents were reported to police late last week.

Police were also alerted last week to the fact that an unknown individual had cashed a check stolen from a local youth athletics organization at the Sovereign Bank on Nassau Street.

The check, for $495, was cashed on May 15, but the loss of the money was not reported until Friday, September 12. There are no suspects in the case.

Burglaries and Thefts

A Princeton University student reported that at an unknown time between August 30 and September 5, an unknown person entered her 1903 Hall room and stole two diamond stud earrings, and a South African gold coin, known as a Krugerrand. Combined, she valued the items at $2,400.

The victim reported that she had left her room unlocked.

Another resident of the same hall reported that between September 4 and September 5, an unknown person had entered her unlocked room and stolen a silver watch, two silver cuff bracelets, and a 24-inch amber necklace.

She valued the missing items at $400.

A Dickinson Street resident reported to police that between July 19 and September 9, someone had stolen $3,200 worth of her property from a basement storage room.

The missing goods are: 200 compact discs, and one black leather bag.

Seminar on Long-Term Health Care Insurance

The Princeton Senior Resource Center will sponsor a seminar on long-term health care insurance on Wednesday, September 24, at 1, at the Suzanne Patterson Center. The Center is located directly behind Borough Hall.

Nancy Morith

Seminar leader Nancy P. Morith will discuss the types of care available and will offer suggestions for determining if long-term care insurance is appropriate and how it works.

Most adults have no coverage – government or private – to pay for long-term care services. Yet neither Medicare nor most private insurance plans provide financial coverage for long-term care needs, services that can be extremely expensive over time.

Call the Princeton Senior Resource Center at 924-7108 to make a reservation for this program.

Free Day of Activities At Princeton YMCA

On Saturday, September 27, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. the Princeton Family YMCA will offer a free day of activities for the whole family.

Highlights include a free upper body massage, a body fat analysis and free fitness evaluation, new techniques for working out, with a demonstration of the fitness equipment, tips from a personal trainer and a free session, and a one-hour family swim from 3 to 4 p.m.

Food and gifts will be available. The initiation fee will be waived for persons joining the YMCA on September 27.

For more information, call 497-YMCA.

Generation to Generation Discussion at Library

The Princeton Public Library will hold a book discussion group, "Generation to Generation," for students in grades six to eight, accompanied by a parent, guardian or other adult, starting on October 15.

The group will meet at 7:30 p.m., at the library on the third Wednesday of the month, for the purpose of providing a shared experience of reading and discussing books across generations.

Titles to be discussed include Katherine Paterson's Lyddie, the story of a poor, yet independent girl who works in the mills of Lowell, Mass., in the mid-1800s; and Grab Hands and Run, by Frances Temple, an escape story about a family fleeing political oppression in El Salvador.

Also on the program is Zeely, by Virginia Hamilton, featuring Geeder Perry, an imaginative 11-year-old girl, convinced that a young woman named Zeely is secretly a Watusi queen; and Gary Paulsen's Hatchet, a survival story of a 13-year-old boy stranded in the Canadian wilderness.

Copies of the books will be available at the library; registration began September 15. To register, or for more information, visit the Children's Room or call 924-9529.

Preference for children's programs is given to families with Princeton Public Library cards. Those without cards who would like to attend will

FARMLAND PRESERVATION Act
Government dollars aren't the only ones that preserve open land. As consumers, the way we choose to spend our dollars goes a long way toward determining the quality of our local landscape. One of the best ways to help preserve farmland in the Garden State is to support your local organic farmer. You'll also help to protect the environment, support the local economy, and keep small farming viable in the nation's most densely populated state. In return, you'll get fresh, delicious produce that has traveled a few short minutes — not a few thousand miles. The Whole Earth Center has a long-standing commitment to supporting local organic farming. We get to know our local growers and work with them to bring our customers the best of the Organic Garden State. We invite you to stop in today and find out how good food really tastes!

Special assistance for children, parents and other caregivers with disabilities who want to participate in library-sponsored programs may be arranged upon request.

Young Achievers Seeking Advisory Board Members

The Princeton Young Achievers (PYA), which sponsors a number of learning centers to provide meaningful educational opportunities and academic support for students who attend the Princeton Regional Schools and/or reside in affordable housing areas, is seeking new members for its advisory board.

Members must serve on a PYA subcommittee; be a contributor of resources; visit each learning center site at least once annually; and attend PYA meetings regularly (four or five times per year).

The PYA learning centers began serving students on Monday, September 15. The centers, begun during the 1993-94 school year, served more than 200 youngsters during 1996-97. More students are expected to use the centers this year.

Funding for PYA is shared among the Princeton Regional Schools, Princeton Housing Authority, Princeton Community Housing, Inc., and the community. Because a large part of the funding is raised through grants and donations, an important task of the Advisory Board is to find funding sources to maintain the program. Money is sought from foundations, local businesses and concerned individuals.

For more information, call Nicole Moore, coordinator of the Princeton Young Achievers, at 924-5601, before September 30.

Outdoor Expert to Sign Books at MarketFair

Outdoor expert Eric Holmlund, co-author with Jack Drury of The Camper's Guide to Outdoor Pursuits, will sign copies of the book at Eastern Mountain Sports, a store in Princeton MarketFair, on Saturday, September 20, from 1-3. The shopping mall is on the southbound side of Rt. 1.

The book takes an in-depth, yet humorous, look at basic camping skills such as selection of proper equipment, proper clothing, setting up shelters, building safe campfires, and safe and efficient food preparation.

It also addresses challenging and sometimes confusing topics like map and compass navigation, risk management, conserving energy on the trail, and group dynamics on the trip.

The book contains information and guidelines consistent with "Leave No Trace Outdoor Skills and Ethics," an organization that promotes responsible and ecologically sound camping practices.

The authors provide readers with the information needed to help them select equipment, plan and prepare healthy and nutritious backcountry meals, use state-of-the-art minimal impact camping techniques, interpret topographic maps, and use

Bringing Rich Variety to New Season, Emily Mann Hopes to Raise McCarter's Profile Even Higher

Just as the election of a new President triggers a spate of wondering about who will run four years later, the end of each season at McCarter Theatre carries with it the question of what the next year will bring.

What does McCarter Artistic Director Emily Mann look for when she begins the process of creating a season — a season which this year includes June Moon, The House of Bernordo Alba, Cymbeline, Safe os Houses, and The Coptain's Tiger?

"I try to give a really strong set of contrasts and a real balance," said Ms. Mann, the playwright-director who begins her eighth season at McCarter. She seeks balance between classic repertory and new work, between comedy and tragedy.

"There is a reason for that," she said during a short break in the week before the opening of McCarter's initial production, June Moon, "It is to give great variety to the season. This season we have African, Spanish, American, English. It's as full of variety as any theatrical experience I can do with my limited number of shows."

She will direct two of this season's five plays, The House of Bernorda Alba, by Federico Garcia Lorca, and Safe as Houses, by Richard Greenberg.

Ms. Mann selects those plays she wants to direct "when something just gets deep inside of me and I have a gut feeling that I have to do it." She has wanted to direct Bernarda Alba for many years, "and I've been in love with Richard Greenberg's play since he wrote it, and that's a year and a half now."

Emily Mann
McCarter's Artistic Director

Longer Life for Productions

Sometimes she will direct because an actor or actress comes to her with something she can't resist. "Or it can just be something I've wanted to do for many years. Cat on o Hot Tin Roof was one, Three Sisters was another."

Looking at the past seven years, she sees McCarter as having moved into the top rank of regional theaters, with a national and a growing international profile. In 1994, McCarter received a Tony Award as the nation's Outstanding Regional Theater.

"I'd like to go further and bring us even higher," said Ms. Mann. "I want to do more works and to introduce more works into the national repertory. I'd like to see more partners so that our really superb plays don't die after three weeks."

Her hope is also to see more touring of plays and more moving of pieces into other theaters, "because so often we have just fantastic pieces that live only in people's memories."

The McCarter artistic director sees the lifeblood of the theatre as having existed outside New York for a long time. "But now it's crystal clear that Broadway is fed almost entirely by the not-for-profit theaters in New York and outside, and that the regional theaters are really the national theater.

"I'm not sure this hasn't been true for perhaps the past 15 or 20 years, rather than the last ten. But I think people are becoming more aware of the truth of this."

A New Fugard Play

The McCarter Season will conclude with the American premier of The Coptain's Tiger, written and directed by South African dramatist Athol Fugard. It is a highly personal new play about his life as a beginning writer haunted by a treasured photograph of his mother as a young woman. Mr. Fugard will also act in it.

This will be the third Fugard plan during Ms. Mann's tenure, and it reflects a relationship that began about 15 years ago when she directed his play, Hello ond Good-bye.

They did not meet until much later, about seven years ago, when Moster Harold was on Broadway. After she was appointed McCarter's artistic director he was the first writer she thought must come to Princeton.

When Bozeman ond Lina was at the Manhattan Theatre Club. Ms. Mann was so moved by the work that she wrote Mr. Fugard a letter. He wrote back. Shortly afterwards they met to talk about his coming to McCarter.

The first McCarter production of a work by Fugard was Hello and Good-bye. This was followed by Valley Song, which was highly successful in New York and internationally.

"He said McCarter is my home now in America, and he gave me his new play, The Captain's Tiger, before anyone," said Ms. Mann. "I read it overnight and faxed him in the morning saying it was beautiful and when did he want to do it."

Asked to describe her most exciting night in the theater, Ms. Mann said there were two. The first was when she was nine years old and traveled from Northampton, Mass., with her synagogue group to see The Dybbuk in the Yiddish theater on Second Avenue.

A precursor of The Exorcist, The Dybbuk, a classic of the Yiddish theater, portrays a helpless woman's possession by a frightening spirit.

"There was the moment when the man's voice came out of the woman," said Ms. Mann. "There she was with her thick black braid against her white dress. She was a beautiful young woman and this horrible voice came out of her and I wanted to scream. It was a thrilling and scary event."

Her second most memorable night in the theater was just this summer when she traveled to Pretoria, South Africa, to see The Captain's Tiger and have dinner with Athol Fugard after the performance.

"I thought, this is why I'm in theater and this is what it means to be truly alive."

MCCC Lecture Series Begins with Local Author

Skillman resident Robbie Clipper Sethi, professor of English at Rider University and the author of an extensive list of fiction, poetry and essays, will be the inaugural speaker when Mercer County Community College gears up for its Distinguished Lecture Series this fall.

Ms. Sethi's lecture will take place in room 110 in the Communications Center on the West Windsor Campus of Mercer County Community College, 1200 Old Trenton Road, on Tuesday, September 30, from noon to 1:15 p.m. All lectures in the series are free and open to the public. For information, call 586-4800, ext. 3360.

This opening lecture draws upon Prof. Sethi's latest works of fiction. The most recent, The Bride Wore Red, is a collection of short stories that deal with an extended family from India who move to New Jersey and marry European-Americans.

Even though the book is categorized as fiction, the author's own marriage to a Punjabi Sikh provides much of her insight into the difficult issues of identity, love and conflict in a cross-cultural marriage.

Prof. Sethi, who has served as an editor of Mercer's annual Kelsey Review since 1989, shares her knowledge at workshops and writers' conferences at colleges and universities, and speaks about fiction reading in book stores. Most recently she held a workshop on prose at the New Jersey Teen Arts Festival.

Bike-A-Thon Habitat Fund Raiser

The second annual Habitat for Humanity Bike-A-Thon will be held on Saturday, September 20, beginning at 9 at the West Windsor Community Park, North Mill Road entrance.

Each cyclist is asked to raise at least $100 in sponsorship and may ride either 31 miles or the round trip of 62 miles around a well-marked route through West Windsor, Cranbury, Plainsboro, South Brunswick and Princeton.

Supported by former President Jimmy Carter, Habitat builds simple, decent houses for those who are without shelter.

Following the ride, a picnic is planned at the nearby Prince of Peace Lutheran Church from about noon to 1. Pastor Gregg Kaufman, one of the 31-mile riders, will conduct a brief worship to celebrate the cooperative nature of Habitat's housing ministry.

For more information, call 921-3695, 393-8009, or 908-329-8762.

Arthritis Sufferers Find Relief

MEDICAL MATTERS: Dr. John Mercuro, director of the cardiac catheterization laboratory at the Princeton Medical Center, discusses plans with LaVerne Hebert, chair of the White Elephant Rummage Sale, to benefit the laboratory.

Registration for Second Formers (freshmen), choral groups, varsity athletes, the Periwig student theater group and the school orchestra was held on Wednesday, September 3. All other students arrived on Saturday, September 6.

Lawrenceville is fully enrolled with 778 students, both boarding and day, from 35 states and 24 foreign countries.

The school has hired 20 new faculty members this year in subjects that include mathematics, religion, art, dramatic arts, English, history, science, Spanish, and interdisciplinary studies.

New courses this year include Chinese language, introduction to scientific psychology, and advanced environmental science.

A new Visual Arts Center, scheduled for completion in December, will house studios for painting, photography, drawing, design, printmaking, sculpture, and ceramics, as well as major exhibition spaces for student works, displays of contemporary art, and major works from the school's own collection.

The F.M. Kirby Science Center is scheduled for occupancy in the spring of 1998. A 55,000-square-foot building designed by the Hillier Group, it contains 12 laboratories, nine laboratory/classrooms, a greenhouse, several team-teaching rooms, four mathematics classrooms, a dedicated computer room, an audiovisual learning center, and a joint math/science department area.

The entire building will be wired to accommodate a full complement of computers, which will be connected to the campus computer network and the global Internet.

Med Center Auxiliary Sale Is Sept. 28-29

The 78th annual White Elephant Sale, sponsored by the Auxiliary of the Medical Center at Princeton, will be held Saturday, September 27 from 9-4, and Sunday, September 28, from 10 to 3. The location is Princeton House on Herrontown Road (off Route 206).

Each year proceeds from this sale are designated for a special purpose at the Medical Center. All proceeds from this year's sale will be used for the cardiac catheterization laboratory.

Cardiac catheterization is a diagnostic test used to evaluate a patient's blood flow through the heart to monitor the heart rate and rhythms. The department performs tests such as EKG, echocardiography, stress and thallium stress tests and cardiopulmonary exercise tests which help patients adapt to changes needed to regain and maintain good cardiac health.

This new state-of-the-art, fully digital laboratory is located on the third floor of the hospital, easily accessible to the same-day admissions area and the post anesthesia care unit, and adjacent to a comfortable family waiting room.

Through the years — from World War I, with the Attic Shop on Chambers Street, to the current June "Fetes," Christmas boutiques and White Elephant Rummage Sales — the Auxiliary has used the proceeds from these events for the purchase of air conditioning and modern equipment to update the Center and to help in the establishment of new departments and treatment centers.

The Auxiliary includes men and women members who contribute financially as well as volunteering their services in-hospital and to the sponsored events.

The White Elephant Rummage Sale will feature antiques and art, frames, books, bric-a-brac, linens, furniture, jewelry, children's toys and clothing, household items, designer clothing for men and women, working small appliances, sports and exercise equipment, and other special donated treasures. Everything is in good condition and at bargain prices.

Jim is going home today, with a little help from his friends!

Jim and his wife visit his mother-in-law regularly here at Hamilton Continuing Care Center. They have always been impressed with the care she's received. So when Jim fell at home and suffered multiple fractures, his doctor suggested short-term subacute rehab before returning home. For Jim, there was only one choice —Hamilton Continuing Care Center.

Jim worked hard with his friends in rehab and was able to drive home 2 weeks later. Through the short time Jim was with us he made a lot of friends and still visits them regularly.

Another Alternative to Millstone Bypass: Depress Rt. 1 at Washington Road Crossing

To the Editor of Town Topics:

As a resident of the Penns Neck area who feels that the Millstone bypass is ill-conceived and that the closing of Washington Road would have a disastrous effect upon long established access to Princeton, I wish to commend Dr. Godfrey for publicly expressing his support for an alternative plan.

In principle I am totally in agreement with him. The need for the bypass is very questionable, particularly considering that it is essentially a link in what could easily become a heavily traveled route between the Turnpike and U.S. 1. He is also correct in his judgment that Washington Road must remain a public highway and not become a part of the University network of roads. Both for historic reasons and because of its unique stand of bordering elms, it should remain as it now exists, the long established entrance to Princeton. Finally, it is true that Alexander Road is not utilized sufficiently as a conduit for traffic to and from U.S. 1.

I would suggest, however, that Route 1 should be depressed and that Washington Road remain at grade level. Depressing Washington Road at the crossing would involve starting the necessary cut for the approach a considerable distance from the corner. On the eastern (Penns Neck) side there would necessarily be considerable disruption for people whose properties border Washington Road. Also the Baptist Church, the adjoining cemetery and the Red Lion Inn, all registered on the State and National Register of Historic Places, would remain at the level of U.S.1. The more convenient access from Washington Road would be much more difficult. On the other hand U.S. 1, could be depressed and even moved slightly to the west (Princeton side) with far less effect upon established homes. Depressing U.S. 1 at this point might even lessen the effect upon the nearby homes of the noise generated by traffic.

Likewise, I believe that rather than directing traffic to Alexander Road through the old village of Princeton Junction, it would be better to build a connector road between Route 571 and Alexander Road to the west of the railway tracks. As Dr. Godfrey suggests, all traffic bound for U.S. 1 would be directed to Alexander Road. Only traffic bound for Princeton would use Washington Road. This would alleviate to some degree the traffic problems that concern the residents of Penns Neck.

I have no quarrel whatsoever with Dr. Godfrey's basic idea. He understands the need for change but he is looking for alternatives that better protect the environment and the long established road patterns. I hope Dr. Godfrey and others who share his concerns about the present Department of Transportation plans, will consider these suggested revisions to the alternatives suggested in his letter.

This is a matter which deserves careful consideration and Dr. Godfrey deserves thanks for his thoughtful letter.

Cultivating a "Meaner" Soccer Squad Not an Appropriate Goal for PHS Coach

In your Edition of September 10, left hand column, front page, a picture of the PHS Soccer Coach, Wayne Sutcliffe, appears with the caption "Hoping to Cultivate a Meaner Squad." An extended article about the PHS team appears on page 38.

Would Mr.Sutcliffe care to tell Princeton why he desires a soccer team that is a "little 'meaner'," and what the consequences might be to character-building, or the educational environment more generally?

It seems to me that among the purposes of a high school athletic program are the building of character, learning team play, and promoting physical health. It is not clear how "meaner" is relevant, except perhaps in an environment where winning justifies itself, and is celebrated above all other things. If the PHS athletic program has written objectives, I somehow doubt that "meaner" is among them.

We do not have to look far to see the corrupting influence of some athletic programs on the character of young people. While it would be naive to suppose that the athletic program at PHS could separate itself completely from the mixed messages given by society, is it unreasonable to expect that our teachers/role models are promoting anything other than fair play, honest competition, and attitudes that are generous in victory and gracious in defeat?

Township Committee Candidate Promises More Prudent Use of Funds

To the Editor of Town Topics:

A statistic that might interest the people of Princeton Township. According to our tax assessor's office, only 20.7 percent of the property taxes collected in Princeton Township goes directly to the municipality. The other nearly 80 percent is divided between the county and our schools. So in effect, only a small percentage of our tax bill is actually controlled by Township Committee. Although relatively small in percentage, this is still a significant dollar figure - over $7 million.

Another statistic that might be of interest. To date, we, the taxpayers, have spent nearly $300,000 on a new municipal complex, everything from architect and legal fees to topographical maps and a subsurface investigation. In fact, we have paid over $200,000 to the architectural firm of Faridy, Thorne, Fraytak, P.C. for plans that will never be used, money that can never be recovered.

With our bonded debt consuming close to 20 percent of our current budget and with capital projects, such as the new municipal complex and the library expansion, commanding future budget dollars, we cannot afford to squander our limited revenue.

By electing me in November, you could be assured that our tax dollars would be spent wisely.

Race for the Cure Helps Focus National Attention on Breast Cancer

To the Editor of Town Topics:

I wrote at about this same time last year describing my emotional response to running the Race for the Cure even though I am not a runner and have not yet been diagnosed with breast cancer. These variables remain the same as the 1997 Race for the Cure approaches on October 5th. But I write this year to correct an erroneous statement I made at the conclusion of that letter: "breast cancer is not a gender, political or class issue."

My not-so-light summer reading included Karen Stabiner's book To Dance With The Devil: The New War on Breost Cancer. In 518 pages she proved just how wrong I was. Dead wrong, as it turns out, for too many women.

Stabiner poignantly and methodically describes the political and power contexts that have changed only since 1990 to finally create a national strategy for breast cancer research and health care. Such a strategy was profoundly lacking prior to this decade. Political and gender issues were definitely relevant and she describes the metamorphosis both through stellar research of the facts and thorough descriptions of personal case histories.

And, of course, the existence of managed care surely made breast cancer a class issue, determining which women had access to the best care finally being provided.

I apologize for the misleading remark. I highly recommend both reading the book and supporting the race which benefits the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation. This foundation is a sterling example of the differences that can be made because of the success of volunteer and political advocacy.

Stabiner opens her book with a quote of Dr. John Glaspy and I will close this letter with it as I sadly note that in 1995 I ran commemorating one breast cancer survivor, in 1996 four survivors, and come October 5th I run for eight. As Dr. Glaspy says:" There are two kinds of people in this country — those who know someone with breast cancer, and those who will."

One-Time Defender of Master Plan's Sanctity Now Wants to Change It for His Own Benefit

To the Editor of Town Topics:

Although I am neither for nor against Alain Kornhauser's request for a major zoning change to the Master Plan, it seems highly ironic to those of us who, unhappily and expensively, had to appear before him when he was a member of the Princeton Regional Planning Board.

At one meeting, Mr. Kornhauser recused himself and then, surprisingly, spoke from the audience against our application, urging his fellow board members to deny the request even though advantageous to the Township, the Borough and the surrounding communities.

The point he emphasized was the Master Plan was a perfect document and could not be changed. It was part of the Planning Board's sacred trust to the community, particularly with respect to the "sensitive" Princeton Ridge where the Kornhausers are now personally concerned with buying Our Lady of Princeton.

Master Plans should not be dead instruments. Zoning changes should be considered periodically but should always be based on the question: Will a zoning change be beneficial to Princeton?

The Planning Board's ordinance making the building of a Continuing Care Retirement Community difficult, or impossible, is typical of bad governance. Every month, we continue to lose a number of long time, devoted Princeton residents to far-away places.

Watercolorists Unltd. Plan Canal House Show

Princeton watercolorist Betty Whelan Donovan is chairing an exhibit by Watercolorists Unlimited, a group of 22 area artists, who will hold their sixth annual show and sale at the historic Blackwells Mills Canal House, Blackwells Mills Road, Somerset, from October 11 to 13.

Jersey farm and Delaware and Raritan Canal scenes are among the artists' subjects. The show includes a variety of styles and themes.

Members of the exhibition committee, all of whom will also exhibit work, include Miriam Friend, Mershon Drive; Lorraine Williams, Belle Mead; Marietta Kust, Pennington; Bernice Fatto; Sandra Goldberg; Wilma Shimer and Virginia Swanagan.

Proceeds from the sale will benefit the Blackwells Mills Canal House Historical Association, which maintains the canal house. Built in 1835, when the Delaware & Raritan Canal opened, the house was home for the tender of the swing bridge over the canal at this major crossing.

Blackwells Mills Road, connecting River Road and Canal Road on either side of the Millstone River, has been in existence since the 1740s. During the canal's heyday the crossing was a bustling center where produce from area farms was loaded onto canal boats for shipment to urban markets.

After the canal closed in 1933, the bridge tender's house fell into disrepair until 1971, when a group of local citizens formed the Canal House Association to restore and preserve it.

When the D&R Canal area was designated a state park in 1974, the canal house became state property. The association now maintains it under lease from the state.

Exhibitors, in addition to those already mentioned, include Harriet Kaftanic, Linwood Circle; Janet Singley, Belle Mead; Joan Quackenbush and Virginia Hopkins, Lawrenceville; Vera Harrop and Gail Robertson, Pennington.

Artists Rita Calo, Peggi Cunningham, Betty Reeves Klank and James Morse will also show work, as will Elza Dima, Cecil Letts, and Mary Kramarenko.

Exhibit hours are 10 to 5 on Saturday, noon to 5 on Sunday, and 10 to 5 on Monday.

Sketching Workshop To Focus on Outdoors

The Stony Brook-Millstone Watershed Association, on Titus Mill Road in Hopewell Township, will present a half-day, hands-on workshop, "The Art of Field Sketching," Saturday, October 4, from 9 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. The workshop is designed for adults and high school students.

Particlpants will explore the value and history of field sketching, as well as the techniques and problems associated with this activity. They will learn to use basic drawing tools — such as gesture, contour and memory sketching — and to work with pencils, colored pencils, and watercolor pencils.

The combination of these sketching techniques with good field observation should help the group discover nature's gifts to artists.

Fees are $12 for members; $16, for nonmembers. Meet at the Buttinger Center near the Watershed Association's main office building.

Pre-registration is required and enrollment is limited. For information, call 737-7592.

The College Art Gallery of The College of New Jersey opened its 1997-1998 season with the annual "Art Faculty Exhibition" on September 10. It will remain through October 1.

The exhibit is a showcase for the artistic diversity and talent of TCNJ faculty members.

The gallery, located in Hollman Hall on the campus of The College of New Jersey, is open Monday through Friday from noon to 3 p.m., with extended hours on Thursday from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., and Sunday from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. All exhibitions are sponsored by The College of New Jersey, Department of Art.

Exhibits

"The Varying Landscape," an exhibit featuring landscape paintings by three different artists will open in the Stony Brook Gallery, the Stony Brook-Millstone Watershed Association's gallery in Hopewell Township, on Saturday, September 27. An opening reception will be held Friday, September 26, from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

The landscapes are realistic or fantastic — and sometimes a combination of both. They are excellent examples of the way in which artists can enhance nature's continually-evolving combinations of form, color and texture.

Gallery hours are 10 to 5, Wednesday through Friday, and Saturday, from 10 to 4. The exhibit will be on display through November 8.

The work of Princeton artist Nancy Lee Kern will be on display October 3 through November 14, at the Merrill Lynch Art Gallery at the Princeton Corporate Campus, 800 Scudders Mill Road, Plainsboro.

Ms. Kern began the series of paintings, prints and drawings, collectively known as "Nature Forms," in 1989, as a series of sketchbooks of flowers in pen and ink and color pencils. There are 32 works in the exhibit.

"They are diaries in time and color," said the artist, who studied with German expressionist George Grosz at the Art Students League in New York.

"The flower paintings are color shapes rendered in thick sculptural strokes that reach to the edges of the canvas," she continued. "The bird's nests followed as a natural inspiration because they are constructed of materials from nature."

Ms. Kern's work is in the collection of the Princeton University Art Museum, the Jane Voorhees Zimmerli Art Museum, New Brunswick, and the Old Jail Museum, in Texas.

She worked with the late Hyde Solomon, former artist in residence at Princeton University, and with Richard Savini, formerly of Princeton University.

The gallery is open every day from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is free.

Eighteen works from the Fine Arts Collection of the New Jersey State Museum are on view now through October 1, at the Merrill Lynch Art Gallery at the Princeton Corporate Campus, 800 Scudders Mill Road, Plainsboro.

The exhibition includes two works by Mexican-born Rufino Tamayo (1899-1991). In the 1950s, Tamayo was the best-known Mexican abstract painter in the United States and Mexico. Younger Mexican artists saw him as the alternative to the dominant Mexican school, which favored subject over form.

David Alfaro Siqueiros (1896-1974), a Mexican muralist, is represented by an untitled lithograph, as is Cuban-born Wifredo Lam (1902-1982), who was a member of the Paris surrealist movement in the early 1940s.

Alejandro Obregon (1929-1992) was born in Spain, but spent most of his life in Colombia. Although the imagery in Obregon's work is usually drawn from the natural environment of Colombia, it is his use of broad, rich strokes of color that gives these paintings their strength. Four works by Obregon are included in the Merrill Lynch exhibit.

Raised in Caracas, Venezuela, and now a New York City resident, Marisol (Escobar) continues to create work of great vitality. Her 1970 sculpture Fishing is included in this exhibit. Other artists who have work in the exhibit are Julio Alpuy, Paulo Chavez, Eugenio Espinosa, Leonel Gongora, Mauricio Lasansky, Jose Medina-Munoz, Carlos Merida, Emilio Sanchez and Jesus Raphael Soto.

The gallery is open to the public everyday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is free.

SILENT WARRIOR, SILENT SENTINEL: This work by Princeton sculptor Glenn Cullen is part of the Juried Art Exhibition opening September 19 at Phillips Mill in New Hope.

Work of Local Sculptor Chosen for Juried Show

A piece by Princeton sculptor Glenn Cullen, Adams Drive, has been selected for inclusion in the 68th Juried Art Exhibition at Phillips Mill in New Hope, Pa. The show opens with a reception on September 19, and will continue through October 26.

The sculpture is a bronze abstract, Silent Warrior, Silent Sentinel, cast by the lost-wax process in a foundry originally located in the barn at Ettl farm, now in Lambertville.

Mr. Cullen has been active as a sculptor since grade school. His early training was at the Cincinnati Museum School and the Cincinnati Art Academy. After moving to the east coast, he studied with Bruno Lucchesi at the New School in New York City.

He has taught sculpture at the Johnson Atelier and the Studio-on-the-Canal. His work has been included in a number of previous Phillips Mill Exhibits. Several years ago he won the Patron's Sculpture Award at Phillips Mill.

Mr. Cullen's work has been included in juried exhibitions of the Summit Art Center, the Hunterton County Art Center, Mercer County Community College, and Monmouth College.

His work was selected from a Mercer County College show for a State of New Jersey traveling exhibit. A bas-relief sculpture by Mr. Cullen is included in the permanent collection of Rider College.

The technology of sculpting, casting, patination and preservation are related to Mr. Cullen's primary vocation as a manager in the area of solid-state chemistry at Sarnoff Corporation.

Gallery hours are Sunday through Friday 1 to 5, and Saturdays, 1 to 8. Phillips Mill is three miles north of New Hope on the Delaware River.

Japanese Influences Focus of Rutgers Exhibit

The dramatic transformation of the seascape and other images of water by vanguard Western artists in the latter half of the 19th century, as a result of their contact with Japan, is the focus of an exhibition at the Jane Voorhees Zimmerli Art Museum of Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey in New Brunswick.

"Riding the Wave: The Japanese Influence on the Depiction of the Sea and Water in Western Art," opened September 2. The show features works by artists such as Paul Gauguin, Felix Vallotton, James McNeill Whistler, Winslow Homer, and others who effected this important transformation of a staple subject in western art.

The works in the exhibition are in various media, including prints, watercolors, ceramics, paintings, and a stained glass window.

Woodblock prints of seascapes — in particular, the popular wave motif of Japanese artists such as Hokusai and Hiroshige — introduced Western artists to bold, decorative compositional arrangements and exotic color combinations.

As a result, from the 1860s through the first half of the 20th century, Europeans and Americans showed an ever-increasing predilection toward abstraction and simplification in their renderings of nature.

Felix Vallotton's 1893 woodcut print The Sea, for example, powerfully evokes the texture of choppy water and the optical effect of sunlight upon it with a minimal use of some expertly-arranged lines and a sphere.

Paul Gauguin's print, Dramas of the Sea (A Descent into Maelstrom) imitates the format of a Japanese fan, while its imagery captures the violence of the sea in an ink-wash technique recalling Japanese sumi ink painting.

Henri-Gustave Jossot also captures the violence of water using Japanese graphic style and a dramatic, non-Western compositional arrangement.

Privat Livemont's color lithograph of 1897, also entitled The Wave, combines the delicate, stylized beauty of some Japanese prints with the decorative and calligraphic Art Nouveau style, merging the motion of the cresting waves with a woman's windblown tresses.

"Riding the Wave" is presented in the Zimmerli Art Museum's Kusakabe-Griffis Japonisme Gallery, which regularly presents exhibitions drawn from the museum's collection of "Japonisme," as well as important works loaned from other institutions.

Japonisme is a French term that refers to the Western enthusiasm for Japanese art and culture which developed after 1853, when Japan opened its harbors to the West, leading to a period of strong reciprocal interest and influence.

The Zimmerli's collection of Japonisme traces the Western encounter with Japan's art, ceramics, and traditional costumes, as well as the appearance of Western motifs and costumes in Japanese art.

It also focuses on the aesthetic influence of Japanese art on Western painting, prints, and stained glass, and finally, on the merging of Japanese and Western styles at the turn of the century and beyond.

The Zimmerli Museum is located on the Rutgers campus, at the corner of George and Hamilton Streets in New Brunswick. Admission is $3 for adults, 18 and older. Rutgers University students and staff, museum members, and children under 18 are admitted free. Hours are 10 to 4:30, Tuesday-Friday; weekends, noon to 5 p.m.

FIFTY YEARS OF EXCELLENCE

Westwind Repertory Company's Excellent Production Of Chekhov's "Uncle Vanya" Coming to Hun School Soon

After seeing the original production of Anton Chekhov's Uncle Vanya, directed by Konstantin Stanislavsky almost 100 years ago, Leo Tolstoy complained to the playwright, "You know that I cannot bear Shakespeare. Well, your plays are even worse than his. Where is the drama? It doesn't go anywhere."

Since then many critics and audiences have been troubled by some of the same concerns that upset Tolstoy: characters' lack of motivation, the play's non-dramatic situations, Chekhov's pessimism, and the fact that nothing seems to happen. These are the challenges taken on by the ambitious Westwind Repertory Company in staging this work that many consider a masterpiece but none would declare to be a crowd-pleaser.

"A non-profit company devoted to promoting arts awareness through education," Westwind presented Uncle Vanya at the College of New Jersey last weekend and will move to The Hun School theatre in Princeton for performances over the weekends of September 26-28 and October 3-4.

Uncle Vanya, a comedy according to the playwright, is filled with both comic and tragic elements, as almost every character in the play — like people in real life — ranges from heroism to absurdity, from tears of despair to peals of laughter, with a wistful, ironic smile often being the most suitable audience response.

MOODY DOCTOR MEETS A FLIRTATIOUS SIREN: Brian Bara plays Uncle Vanya and Julia Ohm is the beautiful Yelena in Westwind Rep's current production.

"To Depict Life as It Really Is"

Chekhov, a Russian physician, declared that his role as a playwright was "to depict life as it actually is" with "absolute and honest truth," and therein perhaps lies Chekhov's greatness and the greatest challenge for producers of his plays. He knew that he had to be "as objective as a chemist, renouncing every subjective attitude in recapturing the quality of life as it is," and, like the best doctors, he recognized the need for sympathy without sentimentality, for tender compassion and affection as well as detachment and distance.

These distinctive Chekhovian qualities run the risk of boring rather than moving and fascinating contemporary audiences, and they certainly run counter to the ingredients — action, violence, sex appeal, high technology, vibrant youthfulness — that make box office in Hollywood, on television or on Broadway in 1997. Westwind's mostly on-target, mostly effective production of Uncle Vanya, however, will reward those whose interests lie in subtlety and richness of characterization and relationships, rather than in action and plot.

Uncle Vanya, in a lively translation here by Vlada Chernomirdik, adapted by David Mamet, presents three autumn days in the lives of the Voynitsky family, on their country estate outside Moscow in the last years of the 19th century. It is the story of a man who laments the loss of opportunities, the loss of love and the passage of time as he enters middle age and of his adult niece, who faces a long life of loneliness, hard work and spinsterhood. These are lives of quiet — and sometimes not so quiet — desperation.

Westwind Repertory Company's Uncle Vanya will play for five performances at The Hun School in Princetnn: Friday and Saturday, September 26, 27 and October 3, 4 at 8 p.m., with a 2 p.m. Sunday matinee on September 28. For reservations call 716-8413.

Brian A. Bara's Vanya is an appropriately disheveled, moody figure. Mr. Bara is convincing throughout, creating a character who is never heroic, hardly ever admirable, but almost always sympathetic, credible and worthy of our compassion even in his most extravagant fantasies and his most outrageous actions. Whether in his drunken late-night musings, in his appearance in the doorway with "sad autumn roses" for his beloved Yelena only to discover her in a passionate embrace with his best friend, in his attacks against his self-satisfied brother-in-law or in bewailing the waste of his life ("I could have been a Schopenhauer or a Dostoyevsky."), Mr. Bara's Vanya is funny and sad, ludicrous and affecting at the same time.

Nicholas Andrefsky's Astrov, the country doctor who is Vanya's friend and Yelena's would-be lover, is also strong and memorable in his role. A conscientious physician, an environmentalist and progressive thinker ahead of his time, Astrov finds many of his youthful enthusiasms dissipated and replaced by his love for vodka. Mr. Andrefsky, wisely cast and compellingly in character, captures these qualities and relates with subtlety and appropriate levels of intensity to each of the other characters. His interactions with Vanya — in friendship, in romantic rivalry, in mutual despondency — are highlights of this production.

Patient Acceptance of Her Lot

As the long-suffering, unprepossessing Sonya, Janet Quartarone credibly demonstrates her unrequited, mostly unspoken passion for Astrov, as well as her affection for her Uncle Vanya and her patient acceptance of her lot in life. Her final speech, after all the disruptive visitors have departed and "everything will be just as it was before," provides a powerfully somber and moving conclusion to the play.

Julia Ohm delivers some excellent character work as the flirtatious siren Yelena, the beautiful young wife of the elderly professor Serebryakov (P. Brendan Mulvey). It is Yelena who becomes the major source of conflict, setting in motion — or into stunned, infatuated inertia — the principal male characters of the play. Ms. Ohm lacks the dazzling appearance that might immediately and convincingly motivate a line such as Vanya's "You know I don't think I've ever seen a more beautiful woman," but she uses her highly expressive eyes to advantage and displays some first-rate, multi-layered character work in her complex, conflicting interactions with her suitors (Vanya and Astrov), her tiresome husband and her rival and step-daughter Sonya.

"Uncle Vanya"

Mr. Mulvey demonstrates both wit and energy in playing the smug, pedantic professor who fails repeatedly to see anyone's point of view except his own, but, as the impoverished neighboring landowner Telegin, known as "Waffles" because of his bad complexion, Steven Dale Davison is only sporadically credible. At times apparently seeking our pity, at times merely ludicrous, this characterization fails to develop beyond that of a one-dimensional cartoon-like figure.

In other supporting roles, Molly Sheffield is superb — captivatingly compassionate and wise — as Marina, the elderly nanny of the family; Mary Greenberg plays an effective Voynitzkaya, the outspoken mother of Vanya, grandmother of Sonya and devoted advocate of her son-in-law the professor; and Shando Darby is a poised, competent, mostly silent Yefir, the workman.

Dale Simon has directed intelligently and rehearsed the Westwind troupe carefully and thoughtfully. With a week off before their next performance at The Hun School in Princeton, the actors and director should discover even more layers to the subtext and the relationships in this infinitely rich play.

All production elements — set design by "the company," lighting design by William Wyatt, costumes by Evelyn Knuppel and sound — thoroughly support the autumnal Chekhovian mood of the play. The set is a simple, realistic representation of a porch on stage right and an elegant living room on stage left with high windows dominating the upstage area. The realistic costumes provide nicely specific visual manifestations for each character, while both the evocative, subtle lighting and the soft background guitar music help to create the tone of melancholy and regret that characterizes this play.

All of these elements should transport effectively to Princeton from the Kendall Hall Studio II Black Box Theatre at the College of New Jersey. More problematic for the Westwind Company will be the somewhat cavernous size of The Hun School theatre and the increased separation there between stage and audience. Many of the actors took advantage of the intimacy of the Black Box Theatre to speak certain lines at the level of a whisper, a technique which worked in the Black Box but will not in The Hun School theatre. Raising the decibel level and at the same time retaining the intimate mood of certain scenes may be a major challenge.

Local A Cappella Groups Sing in Annual Songfest

Two Princeton-area A Cappella singing groups, Jersey Transit and Double Treble, will perform in "Harmonic Convergence 1997," the third annual gathering of post-collegiate A Cappella singing groups from the east coast. This year's concert, which be held on Saturday, September 27, in the historic Bishop James Tabernacle in Ocean Grove, will also feature performances by the Tone Rangers of Washington, D.C., Jones Fall Express of Baltimore, Conn Artists of Hartford, and The Works of Boston.

Throughout the performance, concert-goers will hear oringinal, close harmony arrangements of a wide range of music including jazz standards of the '30s and '40s and more contemporary rock and pop favorites of the '70s, '80s, and '90s. The concert begins at 1:30 p.m. Tickets are $5 each and may be purchased at the door of the Tabernacle. For advance ticket purchases, directions or additional information, call 393-8600, ext. 14.

Founded in 1988, Jersey Transit is a 16-member group of men and women from the Princeton area. For the better part of a decade, the group has performed at numerous private parties and fund-raising benefits, at Veteran's Stadium and Waterfront Park, before Governor Whitman at Drumthwacket, and as the opening act for The Bobs, a nationally popular A Cappella quartet. Jersey Transit also makes an annual appearance in "Spring Sing," another A Cappella festival.

Double Treble is a group of 12 Princeton-area women who began harmonizing together in the fall of 1987. Since then, the group has performed its extensive repertoire of classic standards, jazz, rock, folk, country and pop tunes for diverse audiences that have included New Jersey's governors, The American Boychoir, major corporations, and local senior citizen groups. Since 1992, the group has devoted much of its time to its own "Singsation! An Amazing A Cappella Amalgamation," which raises money for local charities.

MUSIC REVIEW

Le Triomphe de l'Amour Opening Concert Features Baroque Music of Hogarth's London

The 1997-98 Princeton musical season is getting off to a "Baroque" start this year, with a number of local and visiting ensembles beginning their seasons with concerts of both significant and obscure works of the late 17th and early 18th centuries. One of the first of these performances was presented Saturday night at the Unitarian Church of Princeton by Le Triomphe de l'Amour, a chamber music ensemble dedicated to performing Baroque music on original instruments.

Saturday night's concert featured "Music from Hogarth's London," works composed in England in the early 18th century for a small ensemble of strings, recorder, flute, harpsichord, and singer. Close to one hundred people turned out early for a pre-concert lecture by John Burkhalter on the artistic and social climate of London during the life of William Hogarth, an artist deeply involved in the musical world.

Hogarth's view of the arts held that the function of music was to divert and instruct. Le Triomphe's concert Saturday night did both, with both well-known and obscure composers represented in the performance. The program began with a cantata for soprano, violin and basso continuo (Compelled by Sultry Phoebus' Heat), by John Stanley, a composer known primarily for organ music. This cantata was sung by soprano Laura Heimes, accompanied by violinist David Myford, viola da gamba player Donna Fournier, and harpsichordist Janet Palumbo. Ms. Heimes sang with a rich lower register, yet was stylistically accurate and sparkly in the upper register, with accurate and clean ornamentation.

Le Triomphe de l'Amour will present its next performance on Saturday, October 25 at 8 p.m. at the Unitarian Church of Princeton. Featured on this concert will be music for harpsichord, four hands, as well as music by Telemann, Abel, and Schaffrath.

As with the other works on the program, the compositional structure of this piece was characteristically Baroque and full of florid lines. All of these pieces sounded as though they could have been written by a well-known Baroque composer such as Handel, yet almost all were by totally unknown composers of Baroque instrumental and vocal chamber music.

Francis Peacock is so little known that despite the admirable musicological research of Le Triomphe's players, it could not be determined exactly when he lived and died. His Scottish Airs for Flute and Basso Continuo, performed by Tom Moore on Baroque flute and Ms. Palumbo, were comprised of familiar and characteristic Scottish tunes set over a figured bass. Mr. Moore played these tunes and their variations very cleanly, with a mellow tone provided by a baroque instrument tuned slightly lower than 20th-century ears would expect. These short instrumental works are a real musicological find, and could easily make their way into the instrumental repertory played on a variety of instruments.

The one major weakness in the program was the harpsichord solo, Suite in G Major for Harpsichord, (Op. 3, No. 5), composed in 1755 by John Christopher Smith, who was a student of Handel. Although the closing Minuet was the best played movement of the Suite, the rest of the work sounded unrehearsed and was not well played, with a number of inconsistent tempi and outright wrong notes.

A Show of Musicological Gems

Ms. Heimes was truly the star of this concert, and returned for two other segments in the second half. Two Songs for Soprono ond Bosso Continuo by Maurice Greene (a composer known primarily for church music) were surprisingly full of Baroque phrasing and effect. These two songs, "The Blythest Bird that Sings in May" and "Orpheus with his Lute" were sung by Ms. Heimes with style and elegance. Ms. Heimes also closed the concert with Marcus the Young, the Noble, and the Brove, a cantata in four movements by John Stanley. Ms. Heimes was accompanied by all the Le Triomphe players in this work. The closing Allegro Air, "Be pleasant, be airy, and constantly praise," not only proved to be an effective piece with which to close the performance, but appropriate advice to the very appreciative audience who had listened attentively throughout this concert of musicological gems.

Le Triomphe de l'Amour has gone beyond the period instrument fad to seek out obscure music which may actually have had a significant effect during its time. The Scottish airs of Francis Peacock led the way for the later settings of Scottish folksongs by Beethoven and Haydn, yet these works are vital unto themselves. It is through performances of works such as these that Le Triomphe de l'Amour is providing its most important service to the performance field.

The Glass Menagerie features a cast of four — two females, one under age 25, the other at least 40 years of age, and two males age 25 or under. Persons must be at least 17 years of age to audition. Mr. Procaccino asks that actors prepare a monologue no longer than two minutes in length. For more information or to schedule an audition appointment, call the Kelsey Theatre at 586-4800, ext. 3581.

Open House and Concert Planned for New Music Center

Westminster Choir College of Rider University will celebrate the renovation of Erdman Hall and the opening of the Presser Music Center at Erdman Hall Sunday, September 28, with an open house and a special concert.

The open house will be held from 2 to 3:30 p.m. with tours of the building which houses piano and voice studios and classrooms.

Immediately following the open house a concert will be given at 4 p.m. in Bristol Chapel. The performance will feature Westminster Choir, conducted by Joseph Flummerfelt, performing Schubert's Mass in G. Soloists will be Westminster faculty members Elem Eley, baritone; Julia Kemp, soprano; and Scott McCoy, tenor. In addition faculty members Anne Gray, soprano; Phyllis Lehrer, piano; J.J. Penna, piano; and Gene Roan, organ, will perform.

Visitors will be invited to experiment in Westminster's piano lab which is equipped with 11 electronic keyboards connected to a master unit through which the teacher may listen to individual students. They will also be able to have their voices analyzed by a computer and projected onto a computer monitor in Westminster's state-of-the-art voice lab for vocal pedagogy.

Built in 1932 as a residence hall and originally known as West Hall, Erdman Hall is one of Westminster's four original buildings. It was closed for renovations in 1989, with the assumption that funding for the project would soon become available. Although the building's interior was gutted, work was never begun because funding failed to meet expectations. In addition, by 1991, Westminster needed to address far more pressing needs that led to its merger with Rider University.

Funding for the $1.5 million renovation project was completed last year when the Presser Foundation of Bryn Mawr, Pa., pledged $250,000 toward the goal. Today the Presser Music Center at Erdman Hall will house classrooms, teaching studios, practice rooms, office studios for the piano and voice departments and Westminster's state-of-the-art electronic voice lab.

Admission to the open house and concert is free, however reservations are required. For reservations or information call 921-2663. For 24-hour concert information call 219-2001.

After Noon Organ Recitals Begins 6th Season

The weekly organ recitals in the After Noon Organ Concerts Series at Princeton University Chapel will begin this fall on Wednesday, September 17 and run through December 10, excluding November 26. Each Wednesday afternoon, beginning at 12:30 p.m., audiences will have the opportunity to hear some of the country's finest organists play a half hour recital on the highly acclaimed E.M. Skinner organ, refurbished by N.P. Mander, Ltd. in 1991.

Penna Rose, Director of Chapel Music, contributes the success of the recitals to the convenient time and high calibre of playing. She states, "Many of our faithful patrons enjoy attending a cultural event during the day, especially an event which features local and national artists playing a variety of organ works."

The season begins on Wednesday, September 17 with Joan Lippincott, principal University organist and continues with Brenda Arnold Day, minister of music/organist at the First Presbyterian Church of Metuchen. On October 1, Mickey Thomas Terry, organist at St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Washington, D.C. will play. The series continues on October 8 with Andrzej Trembicki, director of music at St. Anthony's Church in Jersey City, followed by David Chalmers, artist-in-residence at Gloriae Dei Cantores in Orleans, Mass.

The University organ, acclaimed as one of this country's finest instruments of the English cathedral style, was built by The E.M. Skinner Organ Company of Boston in 1907, then refurbished most recently by the London, England firm of N.P. Mander, Ltd. The organ contains 109 stops of various tone colors and timbres, from the softest strings and celestes to the most powerful reeds like the tuba mirabilis and the gallery trumpet.

The half-hour recitals are open to the public at no charge. Bag lunches may be eaten in the balcony during the recital. For information, call 258-3654.

"Back to Bach" Begins New Season For Concert Royal

Concert Royal, the New York-based period instrument orchestra under the direction of James Richman, opens the 1997-98 season of its "Going for Baroque" series at Richardson Auditorium in Alexander Hall on the campus of Princeton University on Saturday, September 20 at 8 p.m., with Back To Bach, a tribute to the glorious sounds of J.S. Bach.

A pre-concert talk, "How Bach's Music Expresses Religious Ideas," will be presented by Prof. Michael Marissen, noted Bach scholar and professor at Swarthmore College, at 7 p.m.

Joining Concert Royal as guest artists will be bass-baritone Kevin Deas and soprano Christina Bandes. Mr. Deas returns to the Baroque repertoire with Concert Royal following summer performances as Porgy in Gershwin's Porgy and Bess and recording Die Meistersinger with Sir Georg Solti conducting the Chicago Symphony.

Ms. Brandes, hailed as a rising star in the Baroque and Classical repertory, recently earned acclaim in the Mark Morris/Handel & Haydn Society production of Gluck's Orfeo. She appeared this summer at Mostly Mozart, Boston Early Music and Edinburgh festivals.

The program opens with Bach's Orchestral Suite No. 1, followed by two solo sacred cantatas: the Cantata 51, Jauchzet Gott in allen Landen, featuring Ms. Brandes, and the Cantata 82, Ich habe genug, featuring Mr. Deas. The Choral Cantata 140 Wachet auf, ruft uns die Stimme, will close the program and will include the New York-based Cerddorion Chamber Chorus under the direction of Artistic Director Susanne Peck.

Concert Royal was founded in 1974 by James Richman, noted harpsichordist, fortepianist, and one of the leading conductors of Baroque music. Performing the repertoire of the 17th and 18th centuries on original instruments, Concert Royal presents a multifaceted approach to the period by programming all genres of music from orchestral, vocal, and chamber music to opera and opera-ballet.

Concert Royal has appeared throughout the United States at important festivals including Spoleto USA, Mostly Mozart, and Boston Early Music, and abroad in England, France, Germany, Canada, Mexico, and Puerto Rico.

Critcally acclaimed for its fully-stage productions of Baroque opera-ballet, Concert Royal has presented Rameau's Pygmalion; Gluck's Orfeo; Handel's Ariodante and Terpsicore, among countless others. In 1995, Artistic Director James Richman was knighted in the French Order of Arts and Letters for his contribution to early music. Concert Royal is in its seventh season at Princeton University.

Five-concert subscriptions for Going for Baroque are $105 and $75; student subscriptions are available for $20. Single tickets for the September 20 concert, Back to Bach, are $25 and $18; students are $5. For information, call 258-5000.

Penn & Teller, self-described as a "couple of eccentric guys who have learned to do a few cool things," have been together since 1975. Their award-winning magic show has been a long-running hit on and off Broadway. They are regular guests on "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno" and "The Late Show with David Letterman" and have appeared as well on "The Today Show and "Saturday Night Live."

In holding their first benefit of this kind, members of the Friends hope to raise money as well as awareness for the programs the organization helps to fund.

They want, as well, to highlight the library's role in the community. Some programs funded by The Friends include special events for children, like guest storytellers, dramatic programs, music and magic shows. The adult series, "Writers Talking" and "Readings Over Coffee," as well as staff development and continuing education programs are also funded by the Friends.

Tickets for the benefit range from $100. to $200. For more information, call 921-3737.

THE KINGS NOYSE, a Baroque chamber ensemble, will perform at 8 p.m. on September 25 at Richardson Auditorium. The program begins the 104th season of Princeton University Concerts.

The Kings Noyse Will Open Series At Richardson

The Kings Noyse, a Baroque chamber ensemble directed by David Douglass, will open the 1997-98 Chamber Masterworks Series at 8 p.m. on Thursday evening, September 25, at Richardson Auditorium in Alexander Hall on the Princeton University campus. The program begins the 104th season of Princeton University Concerts, one of the oldest continuous series of eminent musical events in the United States, founded in 1894 by Philena Fobes Fine.

The King's Noyse will make its Princeton debut in Consonanze Stravaganti, a program of 17th-century Italian music featuring soprano Ellen Hargis and lutanist Paul O'Dette; with David Douglass, violin; Robert Mealy, violin and viola; Scott Metcalfe, viola; Margriet Tindemans, viola; and Emily Walhout, bass violin. The program includes works of Claudio Monteverdi, Jacopo Peri, Carlo Gesualdo, Giovanni Maria Trabaci, and Dario Castello.

The King's Noyse recreates the type of violin band popular during the Renaissance which entertained rich and poor alike in 16th and 17th-century Europe. The group takes its name from an archaic term for a grouping of string instruments: a "noise" of violins. The artists have developed a unique performance style that is involved and intense, in which the musicians are free to engage the audience directly and even move about the stage. The ensemble specializes in creating programs that include contrasting musical selections, from rough-hewn dance music to elegant fantasias. The King's Noyse has recorded the majority of its repertory on the Harmonia Mundi label.

The innovative fiddlers play on Renaissance-style violins and bows built especially for them, the only set of its kind in North America. Modeled after instruments made by Andrea Amati of Cremona, Italy, in the mid-16th century, they enable The King's Noyse to recreate the sound of the violin bands in their heyday.

Since director David Douglass founded The King's Noyse in 1988, the ensemble has performed at major venues throughout the United States, in London's prestigious Wigmore Hall, and in such festivals as Tage Alter Musik in Regeneburg, Germany, and Festival Oude Muziek in Utrecht, The Netherlands. Through his groundbreaking study of the early violin, Mr. Douglass has developed a unique historial technique. Noted for his versatility, he performs with numerous Baroque ensembles, also playing the viola da gamba and medieval stringed instruments.

Ellen Hargis, soprano, enjoys a busy International career as a specialist in 17th- and 18th-century repertory. She is a frequent guest artist with many leading early and new music ensembles, including the Kronos Quartet, The Seattle Baroque Orchestra, and The Freiburger Baroque Orchestra. She has appeared in concerts throughout Europe, Canada, and the United States, and in festivals throughout the world. Ms. Hargis teaches at the New England Conservatory Extension Division, and is a faculty member of the Vancouver Early Music Program.

Paul O'Dette is known throughout the world for his performances of virtuoso lute music in recital and with the most distinguished early music ensembles. He has made more than 90 recordings, of which several have been nominated for Gramophones Record of the Year award. Mr. O'Dette has performed in broadcasts for more than 20 national radio and television companies around the globe.

An active researcher, he has worked extensively on the performance on 17th-century Italian and English song, continuo practice, and lute technique. Director of Early Music at the Eastman School of Music since 1976, Mr. O'Dette was Artistic Co-Director of the Boston Early Music Festivals of 1993, 1995, and 1997.

Tickets for the September 25 performance, priced at $29, $24, $19; students, $2, are available at the Richardson Auditorium Box Office, open Monday through Friday, 12 noon to 6 p.m. Reservations may be made with Visa and MasterCard at 258-5000.

CHORISTER: Princeton resident Ben Donati is beginning his first year at the American Boychoir School this fall.

Princeton Boy Joins The American Boychoir

Ben Donati, son of Dana and Gianni Donati, Bertrand Drive, is a new student at the American Boychoir School, Lambert Drive. He is one of 20 New Jersey students at the school, which opened on September 9 with an enrollment of 81. According to Headmaster Thomas Thompson, members of the student body represent 24 states and three Canadian provinces.

The returning boys in grades six, seven and eight arrived at the School on Labor Day for a week of rehearsals in preparation for the coming concert season. New boys arrived Sunday, September 7, for two days of orientation before the beginning of regular classes.

Mr. Thompson, a native Texan, noted that there are five Texas boys among the newcomers, bringing the Texas contingent to six. After New Jersey, Texas now has the largest representation at the School.

The American Boychoir School, founded in Columbus, Ohio, is celebrating its 60th anniversary this year. It is this nation's only non-sectarian boarding choir school.

Classical Guitar Stars On a Sunday Afternoon

On Sunday, September 28, Montgomery's Cultural Center 1860 House will present Monica Mugan and Craig Hillelson in an afternoon of classical guitar music. The performance portion of the program will begin at 4 p.m., and will be preceded by an informal lecture at 3 on "Techniques and Performance Practices of Classical Guitar."

Monica Mugan teaches guitar and Kindermusik at Westminster Conservatory and is an active performer of solo and chamber music repertoire locally and in the Princeton Composers' ensemble. She studied guitar at the University of Maine with Keith Crook, where she was winner of the 1992 Maine Classical Guitar College Competition and three-time winner of the Annual University of Maine Chamber Music Competition. She completed her Masters Degree at the University of Cincinnati's College Conservatory of Music.

It was there that she met Craig Hillelson, when both were studying with Clare Callahan, and the two performed regularly in and around Cincinnati. Mr. Hillelson, who attended the Aspen Music Festival and School in 1995 and 1996, was the winner of the Society of American Musicians' Guitar Competition in 1997. He is an Edward J. Noble Concert Fellow at the Juilliard School where he is in the second year of his Masters Degree studies.

The concert will open with the music of Johann Kaspar Mertz (1806-1856), who has been called "a Chopin for classical guitar." The Renaissance music of Francesco da Milano (1497-1543) will follow. Twentieth-century composers Dan Trueman, Radames Gnattali, Paul Lansky and Alberto Ginastera complete the program.

Of the contemporary composers, Dan Trueman is a doctoral fellow in composition at Princeton University. His piece, "I Always Wanted to be a Singer," is a companion to one of Francesco da Milano's. The set was first performed in Taplin Auditorium as part of the Princeton Composers' Ensemble. Princeton University professor Paul Lansky is represented with "Crooked Courante," last of a set of Celtic Harp tunes arranged for guitar.

Tickets for both the lecture and concert are $10 at the door. Montgomery's Cultural Center is located at 124 Montgomery Road, Skillman, north of Rocky Hill off Route 206. For information or directions, call 921-3272.

Cornell Contest Saturday in Ithaca Will Begin Challenge For Tiger Football to Put Together Winning Season in '97

It's too bad Princeton football fans will see less of the traveling Tigers this fall than any other, because this season is shaping up as the kind that may define the character of the program under head coach Steve Tosches more than any of the previous 10.

The action will begin at 1 p.m. this Saturday in Ithaca against Cornell. The game will be carried live by WHWH (1350 AM) and WPRB (103.3 FMj and by C-TEC on tape at 9 a.m. Sunday.

The demolition of Palmer Stadium, putting the Orange and Black on the road for its entire schedule, has already set this campaign apart from the others. Beyond that however is the fact that Old Nassau will be trying to rebound from a losing (3-7) season in 1996. Tosches has had only one other losing campaign (3-7 in 1990) and the program rebounded nicely in 1991, finishing 8-2.

This time, however, he doesn't have an impact player like Keith Elias, waiting to step into a starring role. Elias came along in 1991 and the Tigers won 24 of 30 games the next three seasons.

A second consecutive losing season would start the kind of unfortunate trend not seen here since the early 1980's when Princeton suffered through three straight from 1982 to 1984 under Frank Navarro. Tosches, who is on track with 64 wins to pass both Charlie Caldwell (70 in 12 seasonsj and Dick Colman (75 in 12 seasons) in career victories, would no doubt like to accomplish this in his 12th.

Turning 1997 into a winning season was already a sizeable challenge for Tosches, before the injuries started to hit in the preseason. The first to drop out was Royce Reed, who had a fine sophomore season as a back-up in the secondary. He had a hip injury prior to training camp, and will not be playing this fall. Kevin Hefner, a freshman defensive tackle prospect, suffered a concussion September 4th and is also lost for the season.

Brian Lost for Season

The biggest blow came two days later when sophomore wide receiver Danny Brian suffered a broken collarbone, and will not play this fall. The receiving corps has the least experience of any on the team, and Brian was coming on as one of the best of the bunch.

"He was starting to do some wonderful things," Tosches said at media day a week ago. "We had really been starting to look at him as a good offensive weapon. We still have a lot of confidence in the guys we're working with, but as I have said before, I can stand here and name off five guys who have a combined total of one varsity reception."

On September 9, the offensive line took a hit when promising rookie Dennis Norman broke his fibula. He had been bidding to grab a starting spot at tackle, and at the very least his loss lessens the depth at that position.

"It's a non-weight bearing bone, and will probably heal quickly, but as a freshman, it's unlikely he will be able to just step into the lineup in late fall even if he is ready to play," Tosches said.

THE CHALLENGE AHEAD: Steve Tosches, who has produced eight winning seasons in 10 years, will be challenged to avoid a second consecutive losing one this fall.

While the injuries take their toll physically, Tosches is doing all he can to keep the team on track mentally.

"So much of it is going to have to be shouldered by the maturity of the seniors," he said last week. I spoke to the seniors a few weeks ago in a private meeting and told them that they are going to look back one day on Princeton football history, and next to 1997 there's going to be a little asterisk, there will be a little footnote about playing on the road. And I would love for the next line to be: 'Ivy League champions.' That would be a tremendous tribute to their character."

Senior Tom Ludwig, who has been a starter in the secondary at free safety or cornerback since his freshman season, is ready to respond to the challenge.

"Whatever it takes," he said last week. "We'll do anything we have to in order to win. We lose two players, that hurts, but we have 100 others."

How to Use the Talent

Tosches and his assistants face the task of deciding how to use the talent available in those 100. With the receivers so unsettled, Ludwig and Damani Leech, another pass defender, just might find themslves catching passes in addition to knocking them down, becoming the first two-way players since John Garrett in 1987. It's being talked about, but Tosches doesn't want to tip his hand before the Cornell opener.

Princeton will step on Schoelkopf Field Saturday afternoon, counting on the defense defense to keep Cornell in check. It would be surprising if the score of this contest was anywhere near the 33-27 struggle the Big Red won in overtime last year, because the Big Red's strength is also on defense.

Tiger Football

The Tigers have nine starters returning on defense, including seven seniors. The team leadership will come from this unit. Projected starters up front are senior Griff King and junior Dan Swingos at end, and senior Mark Whaling and sophomore David Ferrara at tackle. Whaling and King were starters a year ago, and Ferrara was defensive rookie of the year as a freshman.

The heart of the defense will be the linebacking corps, which features returning starters Tim Greene and Jamie Toddings, plus Mike Veronesi, who saw plenty of playing time a year ago. The secondary is hoping for the kind of year it had in 1995. This unit had its problems a year ago. Ludwig and Leech will be joined by another returning starter, Bret Marshall, and sophomore Gerry Wilson has claimed a starting cornerback spot.

THEIR LEADERSHIP IS KEY: The leadership of co-captains fullback Mike Clifford, left, and linebacker Tim Greene, plus other seniors will play a large part in Princeton's fortunes.

And there is certainly no problem at punter, where all-Ivy choice Matt Evans hopes to improve upon his league-leading average of 40.7-yards-per-punt. Princeton gave up an average of three touchdowns a game last fall; the Tigers would like to cut that in half this season.

The key to progress on offense throughout the season will be the development of the line. That unit had troubles a year ago, because of inexperience and injuries, and their last eight games the Tigers were lucky to score in double figures. Tosches sees a definite improvement this fall.

"We're really pleased with our offensive line right now," he said at media day. "It's still a very young group, but it is a group that has very much taken a step forward. It is a group that got a baptism by fire after being thrown into some tough situations a year ago. We certainly have seen maturity and devlopment from them."

If the O-Line can block consistently, there will be room for sophomore tailback Gerry Guirato and senior fullback Mike Clifford to run, and time for Harry Naklelny to pass. The five projected starters on the line include tackles Justin Bennett and Jason Graefe, guards Hamin Abdullah and Brian Herdman and center Bernard Marcyk.

The no-name receiving corps has four juniors vying for two spots. Tosches is hopeful that he can develop two consistent pass catchers from the likes of Ryan Crowley, Phil Wendler, Ray Canole and Drew Faulkner. If there is little progress here, it's doubtful the ground game will be able to carry the offense very far.

Assessing the Big Red

With 15 starters returning, Cornell will be looking to change an offense built around the running of Chad Levitt, the league's leading rusher last fall with an average of almost 160 yards per game. With Levitt gone, junior Terry Smith will be counted upon to get the ground game going.

At quarterback, senior Scott Carroll returns. He threw for more than 1,500 yards a year ago, but fired more interceptions, 13, than touchdowns, nine. His favorite target among a veteran receiving corps will be senior Eric Krawczyk, one of the best in the league. The offensive line, anchored by senior center Tom Bickett, has three of five starters back.

The good news on defense is that nine of 11 starters return; the bad news is that this group was the worst in the league last fall. It finished last against both the rush and the pass, giving up 417 yards per game, 76 more than seventh-place Brown. That translated into allowing 280 points in 10 games, exactly four touchdowns per game.

So coach Jim Hofher will be looking for plenty of improvement from his secondary and linebacking corps, both of which return intact. The line has two holes to fill, and one of them is a big one. Graduation took Seth Payne, a first team all-Ivy performer at end, and good enough at that position to rate a tryout with the Jacksonville Jaguars.

Saturday's game shapes up as another close one, perhaps needing overtime to decide the outcome. Of all the road games this season, it is perhaps the one Princeton would have benefitted most from playing at home. Schoelkopf Field has not been a particularly friendly place the last several years. Princeton has won just once there since 1988, pulling out a 22-20 triumph on the artifical turf there in 1992. Cornell has had even more trouble winning in Princeton; in the last 25 years it has won here just twice, the last time in 1983. Homefield advantage has been key in this series.

Consequently, the feeling here is that a victory over Cornell on Saturday would lay the groundwork for a very positive season. Winning the first of 10 consecutive road games would immediately give the Tigers a huge jolt of confidence, and go far to removing the road schedule as a factor.

Trouble is, that victory seems to be just a bit beyond the abillty of Tosches' troops, still struggling a bit to put all the pieces together. Give this one to the Big Red, 17-14.

Extra Points: The "home opener" against Fordham on September 27 at the College of New Jersey field in Ewing Township, will be much more of a test than first thought. The Rams, who have never beaten Princeton in six meetings, have won their first two, blanking Lafayette, 23-0, and outlasting Lehigh, 35-28 in overtime last Saturday. They will face Colgate this weekend. Yale has had a tough pre-season, losing its first three quarterbacks to injuries, and is now going with a freshman at the position. —Jeb Stuart

Ivy Football Forecast

Cornell' over Princeton. Home field should give the Big Red a little extra to decide a game between two equal teams.

Brown over Yale*. A toss-up contest between two very weak teams featuring inexperienced quarterbacks. Bruins get the nod on nothing more than a hunch.

Harvard* over Columbia. If Crimson can't beat Columbia at home, it can forget about any thoughts of Ivy title.

Penn* over Dartmouth. Quakers looking for big time payback for last-second loss to Dartmouth a year ago in Hanover, and inexperienced Big Green won't be able to do much about it.

PU Beats Hartwick On Go-Ahead Goal By Griff Behncke

Looking to rebound dramatically from last season's 6-8-3 record, the Princeton men's soccer team got off to an excellent start on Saturday, beating Hartwick 2-1 on Lourie-Love Field. Sophomore midfielder Griff Behncke scored an unassisted goal 14:26 into the second half, breaking a 1-1 tie and putting the Tigers ahead to stay.

"It's always good to get a win," said second-year head coach Jim Barlow, "and I think we learned some things as well."

One thing Princeton learned is that it can count on some of its younger players to step up and make a difference offensively. The first goal of the season came at 15:33 in the first half, when sophomore midfielder Justin Kerr won the ball and passed it forward to freshman forward Matt Striebel.

With one defender between himself and the goal, Striebel tapped a perfect lead pass beyond his man to a streaking Jamie Adams. The senior co-captain Adams had come up the sideline to get behind the remaining defender. He took Striebel's pass on the run and blasted it in from eight yards out to give the Tigers a 1-0 lead.

Princeton held on to the lead until 10 minutes into the second half. "I think a few of our guys took a little break on the throw-in," said Barlow, explaining the Hartwick goal.

With Princeton's defense out of position, Hartwick made a quick throw-in to Matt Demming. Midfielder Chris Halupka came up to meet him, but before he could close the gap, Demming got off a quick shot. Shielded by Halupka, Princeton keeper Ethan Bing was beaten wide right, and the the score was tied at 1-1.

Less than five minutes later, Behncke put the Tigers back on top. He took the ball on the right side, and spun to avoid a Hartwick defender. With a second defender between him and the goal, Behncke got around him with another spinning move, and fired a quick shot from 13-yards out that caught the goalkeeper flat-footed.

"It bordered on being out of control – Griff told me he was a little dizzy afterward – but he managed to keep his balance," said Barlow on Monday.

Princeton was outshot 16-8 by Hartwick, but the Tigers were still able to hold on to the 2-1 lead for the remainder of the contest. Much credit for that goes to senior goalie Ethan Bing, who made eight saves.

"I think he's gaining more and more confidence," said Barlow. "Right now, he needs to make smarter decisions about when to come out after the ball and when to stay put."

According to Barlow, Bing found himself too far from the goal at points in the first half and needed to "scramble to make the plays." In the second half, he managed to settle down, and turned in some impressive athletic saves.

The Tigers played Seton Hall on Tuesday, too late for this issue. On Saturday, they play their Ivy League opener, a 7:30 p.m. home contest against Cornell.

PHS Girls' Tennis 3-0 But Tough Matches Loom

The Princeton High tennis team coasted through the first week of its schedule, going 3-0 with consecutive 5-0 victories last week. The Tigers started off with some of the less formidable teams in the CVC, and will gradually be working their way up to tougher competition between now and the start of the Mercer County Tournament in early October.

"I think we're doing well enough right now," said coach Bill Humes, after his players beat Nottingham on Monday. "Nottingham has been our biggest test so far, but we have some tougher teams coming."

Lea Crusey, Meredith Dossin, and Emily Wood cruised through the first, second, and third singles matches, respectively, all winning in straight sets. "I think Emily Wood is playing particularly well right now," Humes said.

Over on the doubles courts, Princeton had the same result. Mara Schindelman and Alexis Distler 6-1, 6-0 in first doubles, and Antonia Chen and Laura Mos were 6-0, 6-0 winners at second singles.

"Our doubles teams are looking good. You have to keep working with them," Humes said, explaining that some players find it difficult to make the adjustment from singles to doubles.

The Tigers blanked McCorristin on Thursday, 5-0. All three singles players and both doubles teams won by 6-0, 6-0 scores.

In the season opener, a week ago Tuesday, PHS stopped Hightstown 5-0. Crusey won 6-2, 6-2, with Dossin scoring a 6-0, 6-2 win, and Wood winning 6-1, 6-0.

At doubles, Schindelman and Distler won 6-1, 6-0, and Chen and Mos won 6-0, 6-2.

Princeton plays Ewing, away, on Wednesday at 3:30. The Tigers face Hamilton on Friday at Shady Brook at 3:30, and on Monday they host Hopewell at 3:45.

THE FEW, THE PROUD: Seniors are few and far between on the Hun School football roster this season. Hoping to lead a young squad to success are, from left, senior captains Andy Sachs, Max Wright, and Brendan Tierney.

Hun Looks to Rebuild After Graduating 17

Hun football coach Bill Long saw this coming years ago, when he lined up the team for wind sprints. Calling for his players to assemble by class, he could see that the class of '98 was seriously under-represented in his roster.

He saw it coming, but there was very little he could do about it. Hun graduated 17 seniors and postgrads last June, and now that the Class of 1998 is Hun's senior class, Long has problems. That is not meant to take anything away from the Class of '98; the seniors on the squad are tough and talented. There just aren't very many of them. Long is looking at a very young team this season.

"This is my 25th year as a head coach, and while it's not a surprise, this is the first time I have ever seen this happen," says Long.

The Raiders will build their offense around what Long calls "a couple of outstanding running backs." One is a home-grown senior, Max Wright, of Jefferson Road. The second is a post-graduate student from Illinois, named Kevin Reeves. Wright is also one of three senior captains on the squad.

Another possibility when it comes to the ground game will be junior halfback Xavier Goff. All three run from the halfback spot, says Long. "They are an outstanding group — as good as I've had."

The backs will be taking their handoffs from sophomore quarterback Kevin Walker. At 6' 180 pounds, Walker is big and strong, but young. "He has done a good job so far," says Long, but needs game experience.

Walker will take the snaps from senior center Mike McGarrity, who will be flanked by guards Royal Tuthill and Don Hanes, both juniors. At tackle, long has another of his senior captains, Andy Sachs, and Tom Reed.

Sophomore John Mervin will play split end, with seniors Jeff Servello, Branton Blount, and Billy King all splitting time at tight end.

On defense, Hanes and Sachs will play tackle, with juniors Rob Gifis and Doug Deasey playing end. Tuthill and Reeves will play inside linebacker, with Goff and senior captain Brendan Tierney playing outside linebacker.

Wright, Quirk, and junior Luke Tozzi make up the Raiders' defensive backfield.

"The future here is very bright," says Long. "I have seen some young kids here who are going to be very fine players." Helping them along will be a crop of assistant coaches who, Long says, make up "the best coaching staff in the area." They include John Law, offensive line; Tom Ryan, defensive line; Jim Nehlig, backs and linebackers; Tom Wilcox, offensive and defensive ends; Bill Quirk, defensive backs; Todd Donaldson, linemen; and Bud O'Brien, kickers and outside linebackers.

Hun starts the season on Saturday, with an away game against Bok High School of Philadelphia.

Depth May Be a Problem For Hun Girls' Soccer

As he prepared for the start of the soccer season this week, Hun girls' coach Dave Davis was thinking deep thoughts. Well, at least he was thinking about depth.

With only 16 girls on the varsity roster, he says, "We are strong in every position this year as far as starters go, but this year we don't have a lot of depth."

The Raiders, who played their first game of the season on Tuesday against Princeton Day School, will be a good team if they can stay healthy, says Davis. "The starting 11 can play with anybody. If they stay healthy and continue to stay in shape, we will have a successful season."

On the front line, Hun boasts a pair of players capable or racking up a lot of points. Senior Nina Tinari and sophomore Tessa Montijo will be the spearhead of the Hun offense.

"Nina played for us as a freshman and a sophomore," says Davis. She was away from Hun last year, but returned for her senior year. "She's definitely a scorer," says Davis. "We're glad to have her back."

Montijo was selected to the Mercer 33 all-star team as a freshman, and "is another quality goal scorer," says Davis. "They will make a nice tandem."

Junior captain Kat Geiger will play in the center of the midfield line. "She is really willing to play hard and win 50-50 balls," says Davis. She will be joined by freshman Lindsey Tylus, who comes out of the Hun Middle School program.

"They are both very aggressive and talented with their feet," says Davis.

On the right wing of the midfield line will be senior Tammy Scheer, a four-year varsity player with a lot of speed and a powerful shot. On the left wing, Davis will place senior Keri Marino, whom he describes as a very smart soccer player: "She knows where to be." Marino will also be looked to for the long crossing pass to the forwards in front of the goal mouth.

Senior captain Janet Carter will help anchor the midfield. "She played very well for us last year, and is better this year," says Davis. "We're really impressed with her skills, and she gives us a lot of speed in the backfield."

Playing sweeper for the Raiders will be junior Sara Lopacki, who came in as a transfer last year, and immediately found her way into the starting lineup.

Sophomore Lauren Kwiatkowski was the sweeper last year, but will be moved to stopper this year. According to Davis, "We need her for distributing passes." She will also be encouraged to come forward and take the occasional shot on goal.

At press time, Davis was still debating as to how he would fill the remaining fullback slot.

Senior captain Michelle Lisciandrello, who volunteered to fill in as goalie in the second half of last season, returns to the goal for her senior season. If a few younger prospects show progress, Lisciandrello may move back to a fullback slot, but she is currently the starter in goal.

PDS Tennis Splits Pair, Boys Soccer Wins First

Fall sports began for Princeton Day School last week, with the girls' tennis team splitting its first two contests, and the boys' soccer winning its first. All other teams begin play this week.

PHS Teams Get Set To Start '97 Season

While several Princeton High sports teams have already played their first contests this year, the season gets underway in earnest for everyone this week.

The Tiger football team plays its season opener — and its first game under new head coach Dave Dudeck — on Saturday at Ewing High at 1 p.m.

The cross-country team will open on Tuesday, against Lawrence, at 4:15 at Battlefield Park.

Field Hockey, which played Hopewell on Tuesday, too late for this issue, will face Hightstown, away, on Thursday at 3:45 p.m., and Lawrence at home on Tuesday, also at 3:45.

The boys' soccer team plays Nottingham on Thursday, away, at 3:45, and McCorristin, away, at 3:45 Tuesday. The girls' soccer team plays Nottingham at home on Thursday, at 3:45 and Ewing, away, on Monday also at 3:45.

The girls' tennis team plays Ewing, away, at 3:30 on Wednesday, and plays Hamilton at Shady Brook at 3:30 on Friday. On Monday, they host Hopewell at 3:45.

The tennis team played one of its most difficult opponents, West Windsor, to open the season on Monday, September 8, and lost, 6-0. PDS players found even winning a set difficult to do against this perennial powerhouse.

On Thursday, however, the Panthers were matched against Ranney, and captured a 4-1 decision. Playing first singles, Lauren Kostinas managed to take the first set, 6-4, but dropped the next two, 6-3, 6-1. Keri Bernstein, at second singles, fared better in another close match, beating her opponent, 6-4, 7-6 (9-7). Jenn Gladden picked up another victory for the Blue and White, taking a 6-4, 7-5 match at third singles.

Both PDS doubles teams also won. Andrea Koerte and Janine Winant swept through their opponents, 6-1, 6-2, at first doubles, and Marin Bilzer and Tyler Bracken also breezed to a two-set triumph, 6-1, 6-1.

This week's opponents are Wardlaw-Hartridge and Morristown-Beard.

In its opener last Saturday, the soccer team got a goal from Mike Bodel, assisted by Francesco Rusciano, with eight minutes left in the second half to give the Panthers a 3-2 win over Portledge. Chris Breitenberg gave PDS a 1-0 lead that stood up through the first half. Rich Dool, assisted by Ted Shoaf, added another in the second, but the visitors notched two in the second half to tie the game at 2-2.

The opponents will be much tougher this week. The Panthers face Princeton High, Pingry and Montgomery.

The girls' soccer and field hockey teams were both scheduled to open their seasons this past Tuesday at Hun. The girls' soccer will then face George at home on Friday, while the field hockey team takes on Stuart away on Thursday and faces Pennington at home on Saturday.

The football team will travel to Delaware to meet St. Andrews in its season opener on Saturday. St. Andrews has the advantage of already playing one game. It opened its season last Saturday with a 20-6 triumph over George.

Benefit for Young Family At Hillsborough Golf Club

The Hillsborough Country Club in Neshanic Station will hold a benefit golf tournament on Wednesday, September 24, in memory of Wes Markowsky in order to create a scholarship fund for his two children. The event kicks off with registration and lunch at noon, a shot-gun start at 1 p.m. with awards and a buffet dinner to follow.

Fees are set at $400 for a foursome and $125 per individual. Proceeds go toward a scholarship fund for children John and Allison Markowsky.

"Wes Markowsky was a great fun-loving guy. A golf outing would be something he would have liked. He was so energetic and such a good athlete, a super tennis player. "People just loved him," states Bryce Thompson, owner of the Hillsborough Country Club and Mr. Markowsky's former employer and friend.

Mr. Markowsky joined Thompson Land of Princeton upon graduation from Rutgers University and worked there until his death this past spring at the age of 46. A former resident of Princeton, friends, acquaintances and well wishers are encouraged to show their support by participating in the golf outing scholarship fund raiser.

The Hillsborough Country Club, Wertsville Road, is located in the foothills of the Sourland Mountains only 20 minutes from Princeton and provides some of the best views of the Amwell Valley in the area. LPGA pro Cindy Cooper will be on hand to offer tips and keep the tournament rolling. To register call 908-369-3322.

You don't have to be rich to retire with over a million.

A Merrill Lynch Financial Consultant can show you how at a free seminar.

Retirement is a time to enjoy life, not a time to worry about money or to start scaling down your lifestyle. But if you don't start planning now, that's exactly what could happen.

By the time you retire, you may need 60 percent to 80 percent of your preretirement annual income for living expenses. That is why getting an early start is critical. For example, if at age 25 you contributed $5,000 annually to a tax-deferred retirement account and earned an 8 percent annual return on a diversified portfolio, by age 65 you could end up with $1,398,905. By comparison, if you waited until age 40 to make the same contribution, you could end up with $394,772.*

Your Merrill Lynch Financial Consultant can make a difference. He or she will help you develop a long-term financial plan, advise you on investments and an asset allocation strategy to help meet your financial goals.

Can you afford to retire?

PHS Girls' Soccer Opens With Two Wins Over Rams and Cards

The PHS soccer team never has it easy in the first part of the season. "We always seem to start off with a tough one," says coach Greg Hand, whose players saw Hightstown at the top of the schedule this year.

If the oddsmakers announced betting lines on high school soccer, the Tigers would have been a long shot over the Rams on Friday, but through great defense and a few outstanding offensive plays, PHS opened the season with a big upset, beating the Rams 2-0.

"Hightstown's roster reads like a Who's Who in area soccer," said Hand. "They will be better later in the season."

Princeton played the Rams to a near deadlock in the first half, before Munti Abdul-Karim and Jess Beeson combined to put PHS up 1-0. The score came on a throw-in by Abdul-Karim, who placed the ball perfectly, about 20 yards in front of the post.

"Jess played it perfectly," said Hand. "She fired a shot the like of which you rarely see in high school soccer. It was a bullet — it was in the net before the keeper ever saw it. I think it was at that moment that the players realized that it could be us scoring the goals, and not Hightstown."

Beeson and Abdul-Karim switched roles minutes later, combining for a second goal. Beeson hit Abdul-Karim with a nice lead pass, and the sophomore forward rifled it into the net to make the score 2-0.

Princeton then had to withstand a furious Hightstown attack. Hand gives credit for the team's ability to hold together to a closeness and intensity that developed during the preseason.

"We had a terrific preseason, and I know that was a factor when Hightstown started to send numbers and press at the end of the game."

On Monday, the Tigers hosted Allentown and snuffed their visitors 5-0. It was 2-0 at the half, and the Tigers only kept rolling in the second frame. Abdul-Karim and Beeson each scored one, and Liza Walters, Elizabeth Miller, and Amanda Steele all scored as well.

Next for the Tigers is a 3:45 home game against tough Nottingham on Thursday. "In my book, that's every bit as much of a challenge as Hightstown," said Hand. Princeton also plays Ewing, away, at 3:45 on Monday.

PHS Boys Top Rams 3-0 In Soccer's '97 Opener

The Princeton High soccer team welcomed first year coach Wayne Sutcliffe to the Colonial Valley Conference by opening the season with a 3-0 shutout win against Hightstown on Friday. The Tigers scored twice in the first half and once with 39 seconds remaining to butt the Rams into the loss column.

The biggest contributor on offense was newcomer Dixon Hayes, a Princeton resident who did his freshman year at the Lawrenceville School before transferring to Princeton. Coming off the bench, Hayes took a long clearing pass from senior captain Brian Ruddy, and outran trailing Hightstown defenders to score the first goal at 11:26 in the first half.

The score might easily have been 3-0 at that point, as the Tigers failed to capitalize on some early scoring chances, but junior José DeBernard erased those memories just minutes later.

DeBernard gathered in a head ball from Hayes, and working his way through a pair of defenders, broke toward the right post before firing off a crossing shot that beat the Hightstown goalie to make the score 2-0.

Princeton's third goal came in the waning final seconds, when the Ram defense botched a clearing kick, leaving him with a short-range shot to ice the win.

Princeton's junior goalkeeper Noah Scovronick started the year the right way, making nine saves to earn the shutout. The Princeton defense, keyed by Ruddy and fellow captain Demont Heard, kept the Hightstown opportunities to a minimum.

The Tigers played area rival Princeton Day School on Tuesday, too late for this issue. They face Nottingham, away, on Thursday, and McCorristin, away, on Tuesday.

GOOD START: Princeton High School junior midfielder Mark Wickens looks upfield Friday, during the Tigers' season opening 3-0 win over Hightstown. The win came in coach Wayne Sutcliffe's first game as head coach at PHS.

sat outside the execution chamber while men whose innocence he does not doubt — men whom he had come to know intimately through years of correspondence and personal interviews — were put to death.

"Absolutely, it tries my faith," says the 55-year-old lay minister. "There have been times when I have, not lost faith, but certainly where I became alienated from God. Times when I asked, in Job-like fashion, 'Where are you? Do you exist? Why, if you exist, do you let these things happen? Why is injustice so rampant and so common?'"

In 1994, he sat in a Texas courtroom beside Kerry Max Cook, a convicted murderer. Mr. McCloskey had taken up Cook's case, after long examination of the evidence convinced him that the man had been sent to death row for a murder done by someone else.

SEEKING JUSTICE: From a Nassau Street office, Jim McCloskey and his colleagues at Centurion Ministries, Inc. have freed 25 wrongly-convicted prisoners from jail. The organization is currently in search of adult volunteers. (Telephone 921-0334.)

On the wall in his office is a black and white photo of Mr. McCloskey, Mr. Cook, and Mr. Cook's lawyer, all holding hands at the defense table. It was taken at the moment the jury filed into the courtroom, and just seconds before it was announced that they had decided to re-convict Mr. Cook, returning him to death row.

"I sat there, and I participated in the defense, and I saw those witnesses lie, and I saw the jury believe those witnesses," he says bitterly. The jury's decision drove Mr. McCloskey, himself a Presbyterian, to a Catholic retreat center for two weeks. He went there, he says, "To just reflect on these same questions that we are talking about: Where are you, Lord? Why do you let these things happen? So yeah, it really takes your faith by the throat and shakes it up."

But each time it happens, Mr. McCloskey comes away somehow stronger, re-energized. "My faith has matured as a result," he says. "I used to have a results-oriented faith, but that's not what faith is about. Faith in Christ to me, is a sustenance in times of the insanity and chaos of the world. It gives me, in the end, that spirit and strength to go through this kind of stuff.

"Also, this is a work of miracles...it is a work of miracles to be able to free people who have been buried for years with no hope, and to see how they get freed, and the different people who come forward...It's a miracle-making kind of work as well."

Years of Research

Claims of wrongful conviction and lying witnesses are no rarity in the criminal justice system, but when Mr. McCloskey talks about a prisoner's innocence and a witness's lies, he backs it up with hard evidence. When Centurion Ministries commits itself to a prisoner, it does so on the basis of years of exhaustive research.

"First of all, we get a letter from somebody we've never heard of before," Mr. McCloskey explains. "They always contact us — it never works the other way around. We don't have to look for business. The word's out there that there is this group in Princeton that will spring you, and it won't cost you a dime. So we hear from a lot of people."

Centurion Ministries gets nearly 1,000 new requests for help every year. Since 1980, the group has committed itself to helping 41 inmates. Centurion limits itself to prisoners serving life sentences or awaiting execution, and bases the decision to help on the prisoner's probable innocence, the likelihood that exculpatory evidence still exists, and the lack of all other means of assistance.

(In addition to the 41 cases that Centurion has taken an active part in, there is a file in the office of between 700 and 800 cases documenting prisoners who Mr. McCloskey and his associates believe are innocent, but have been unable to find the time or resources to help.)

Of those 41 cases, 33 have come to some sort of resolution. Nineteen prisoners have been freed when their convictions were overturned. Six have been, Mr. McCloskey says, "quietly paroled." Two were executed in spite of evidence presented by Centurion Ministries, one died in prison, and three were "left behind," says Mr. McCloskey, "because we couldn't develop new evidence that we knew would be sufficient." The remaining two, Mr. McCloskey and his colleagues determined were actually guilty after researching their cases.

Eddie Baker, Centurion's latest success story, is a typical client. He first wrote to Centurion in 1987, claiming that he was innocent of the murder for which he had been in prison since 1974.

"We put him in the pipeline," says McCloskey. "It took, in his case, seven years before we committed [to him]. A lot of correspondence, volunteers reading the transcripts, eventually me reading the transcripts, and the entire written legal history of the case.

"I've visited him in prison several times, interviewing him. Finally, we were able to make a decision, and we believed he was innocent. At the same time, we had to clear the decks and begin working for him. That was in 1994."

> In the late 1970's he was making $55,000 a year, driving a fancy car, and beginning to question the meaning of his life.

When McCloskey says "we" he means himself, long-time assistant Kate Germond, and full-time Seattle-based investigator Paul Henderson. Along with office administrator Kathleen Fisher, they comprise the entire salaried staff of Centurion Ministries.

They are aided by a dedicated group of volunteers from the community, says Ms. Germond, and are currently looking for more. "It's hard to find adult volunteers from the community who have the time, number one, and who are as seasoned and as smart as the volunteers we have right now," she says.

Inner-City Investigations

The research conducted by Centurion Ministries extends far beyond the paper trail its clients leave through police stations, prosecutors' offices and courthouses. Mr. McCloskey will track down the original witnesses in a case and appear on their doorsteps — or sometimes at their prison cells — to find the information he needs. It is work that takes him to places many people would rather avoid.

"I spend most of my investigative time in the inner cities, whether it be South Central L.A., North Philadelphia, Newark, Camden, the Bronx. I've been to all of those places, a lot, and knock on wood, I've never had any kind of a problem."

In Mr. Baker's case, Mr. McCloskey went to the South Philadelphia neighborhood where the murder — a savage ice-pick stabbing of a 75-year-old man — had occurred in 1973. He tracked down Donahue Wise, a heroin addict whose false testimony had put Mr. Baker in jail, and with the assistance of respected neighborhood figures, convinced him to confess to the murder.

In August of this year, 23 years after he went to prison, a

Philadelphia judge granted Eddie Baker a retrial, calling his 1974 conviction a "miscarriage of justice."

Unlikely Crusader

Prowling America's slums never appeared to be the destiny of James C. McCloskey III. The blue-eyed, balding Bucknell University graduate grew up in an affluent Main Line suburb of Philadelphia, and it seemed natural that, like his father and grandfather before him, he would go into business and make a lot of money.

He left Bucknell in 1964, and joined the Navy. After Officer Candidate School, he was stationed in Japan, and then served a year in Vietnam during the war, earning a bronze star with a combat "V." He returned to Japan after his discharge, hoping to go into business there, but his venture failed and he returned to the United States.

He has seen two men he believes innocent be executed, and watched as a third was re-tried and sent back to death row. "Yeah," he says, "it really takes your faith by the throat and shakes it up."

He eventually parlayed his knowledge of the Japanese language and business culture into a job with the Hay Group, a well-known Philadelphia management consulting firm. In the late 1970's he was making $55,000 a year, driving a fancy car, and beginning to question the meaning of his life.

Mr. McCloskey returned to the Presbyterian Church, which he had all but abandoned in college, and began to study scripture seriously. In 1978, he quit his job with the Hay Group, in spite of offers of promotion and an increased salary, and enrolled as a 36-year-old student in the Masters of Divinity program at Princeton Theological Seminary.

In 1980, while serving as a student chaplain at Trenton State Prison, he met his first innocent prisoner: George "Chiefie" De Los Santos. De Los Santos had been convicted of the murder of a car salesman in Newark, but during his nearly nine years in prison, never stopped protesting that he was innocent.

Convinced by De Los Santos, McCloskey took a year off from his studies, tracked down witnesses, read transcripts, and developed the information that led, in 1983, to the release of De Los Santos by a judge who said the evidence against him "reeked of perjury."

McCloskey finished his studies at the Seminary, graduating with a masters of divinity, but he had already found his calling. In 1983, the same year that De Los Santos was released, he founded Centurion Ministries, taking the name from a passage in the Gospel where a Roman Centurion looks on the crucified Jesus and says, "Surely, this man was innocent."

Justice Denied

There is no shortage of ways for an innocent man to go to prison. Asking Mr. McCloskey about them is like turning on a spigot. He leans across his desk, and out it pours.

"Well, it's a combination of factors that commonly combine to cause false convictions. One is sloppy police work – they are overwhelmed by the high rate of crime, and they have too many cases to handle in a qualitative fashion, so they start taking shortcuts, and when you take shortcuts, you make mistakes."

Prosecutorial misconduct is another. "You also have prosecutors who hide the ball –they hide evidence, they suppress statements that are favorable to the defendant so that they can gain a conviction. The name of the game, unfortunately, is to win, and some people really get obsessed with that, and lose sight of the truth-seeking process."

Witnesses can be wrong, he adds, and they can lie. They can be manipulated, or strong-armed by police and prosecutors into identifying an innocent person as the perpetrator of a crime.

"Another reason," he says, warming to his subject, "is shabby, incompetent, lazy, defense lawyering." He consistently emphasizes the first syllable of the word, saying "DEE-fense," the way most northerners do when talking about a football game.

"And what's underneath all this? Indigent people with no money for any kind of a DEE-fense. So, even if they're lawyer might be really dedicated and skillful, they're probably not getting paid much, if anything at all, and they certainly don't have the wherewithal to go out and hire a good investigator or to bring in expert witnesses to rebut those brought in by the prosecution."

And that brings him to his least favorite specimen of all: the jailhouse informant.

"Another thing that we commonly see — and it just infuriates us —," he says hotly, "is the prosecutors' use of common, violent criminals as their star witnesses." He can rattle off a list of wrongful convictions based on "overheard confessions" or other information provided by witnesses who had cut a deal with police or the prosecutor to avoid prosecution themselves. "It's very common. We see it all the time."

Finding Inspiration

Last weekend, Mr. McCloskey got on a plane and flew down to New Iberia, Louisiana. He is there working on the case of David Alexander and Harry Granger, arrested in 1976 for the murder of a convenience store owner.

"We are absolutely convinced that they didn't do it. In fact, we know who did do it. On this trip, I will be visiting with the two real killers, who are in Angola [state prison] for other murders that were done with the same M.O., in the same time frame, and with THE SAME GUN."

One of the men in Angola, he points out, actually confessed to the same murder for which Alexander and Granger have spent 21 years in prison.

"I will also be visiting with the District Attorney for the first time. This DA happens to be the best friend of the governor of Louisiana...and since he has been DA — for the last 16 or 17 years — he has resisted any other previous efforts on behalf of these two men.

"So, I expect a lot of phony civility in that meeting, and nothing to come of it. Another purpose of this trip is to find good lawyers for these guys."

The Louisiana case will be very difficult, he admits, and there are times when the stone wall of bureaucracy, and the iron bars of the prisons seem to be conspiring to sap his faith, and destroy his confidence.

He comes back, in the end, to Isaiah Chapter 59, in which the prophet lamented the same ills, 2,500 years ago, that McCloskey sees today.

"I'll show you," he says, leaning back from his desk to pick up a bible bound in worn brown leather. It opens easily to the bookmarked chapter, where favorite passages are bracketed in ink, with notes scribbled alongside. He reads while making a running commentary on the text.

No one enters court justly, no one goes to law honestly. They rely on empty pleas; they speak lies.

"We see that all the time."

Justice is far from us. We look for justice, but there is none. Justice is turned back, and righteousness stands afar off.

"Here's the part I like," he says, pausing for emphasis.

For truth has fallen in the public squares.

"Truth has fallen in the courthouses all over the United States, so many different times."

The Lord saw it, and it displeased him that there was no justice. He saw that there was no man, and wondered that there was no one to intervene.

"Well," he says, "I happen to feel called to intervene."

of the rink are the Princeton Skating Club and the Nassau Hockey League. PSC is entitled to use the rink from 8 to 10 p.m. most weekday nights, and from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday and 1 to 4:30 p.m. on Sunday. The highest turnout is Sunday, when 200 generally use the rink.

The NHL conducts four games on Saturday starting at 7 a.m. and finishing at 10:45 a.m. and eight on Sunday, from 7 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Serves School Community

Daniel Graziano, chairman of the board of trustees of Princeton Day School, told Planning Board members that the rink is devoted to the PDS community, although it does make the facility available to other organizations.

"Over the past 30 years, the demand for ice time has increased, and is quite great," he said. "In addition we are committed to expanding the figure skating program and that's why we are going with the enclosed rink."

He added that the noise emanating from an enclosed rink is expected to be a lot less intrusive than it was with the old rink, which was open on three sides.

Asked what the use of the rink was in a non-ice capacity, Mr. Graziano said it was minimal. It is used for the PDS fair and as the site of the Bryn Mawr book sale. "I am concerned about the expanded use when it is not in ice operation," said Phyllis Marchand.

Mr. Graziano said he believed the new rink will be a beautiful facility, and there will be a demand for such use. "If this Board said that the rink should be built without letting community groups use it, I believe that's why we're here tonight."

Both Ms. Marchand and Alyce Bush also expressed concern about the early hours of operation and potential noise.

Residents Voice Complaints

A number of homes are located close to the Old Great Road entrance to the rink. Several residents of these homes came to the meeting to tell the Planning Board of their concerns about the new rink.

Robert Hargreaves said he has lived in his house for more than 25 years, and that he was appalled at the proposed impact of the expansion of use during the year and the extension of hours during the day.

Another neighbor, Robert Galick, said the school should be compelled to enclose the new rink with masonry block and to relocate the entrance driveway opposite Stuart Road. He also asked for more screening, for weekday hours of 7 a.m. to 9 p.m., weekend hours of 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., and for a halt to making the rink accessible to outside groups.

Steven O'Connor, who asked to be sworn in, said there had been enough misrepresentation to reopen the application. He said school officials had assured neighbors there was no contemplation of change of use and that his suggestions on moving the rink farther away from the residences were rejected by PDS because of the existence of wetlands.

He presented a 1990 State map that did not indicate wetlands on his proposed site, but Township Engineer Robert Kiser said that maps may not always show all wetlands.

"I find it hard to believe why an educational facility needs to fill the demand for ice time when there are commercial operations doing this," said Lawrence Berger, another neighbor.

A break in the discussion was then called. After everyone returned, Mr. Graziano said he took offense at Mr. O'Connor calling any one at PDS a liar. "The rink has been here 30 years. Everyone bought a house on Old Great Road with the rink across it. If PDS had not undertaken to replace the facility, the situation would have continued as it has for the last 30 years.

"If we moved the traffic to the Stuart Rod intersection it would change the people sitting here," he said. "If we flipped the rink we would have put parking closer to the houses."

Fewer Hours Than Requested

Finally, after more than three hours of discussion, the Planning Board began deliberations on what it would permit PDS to do. Clearly attempting to compromise between the needs of the school and the skating and hockey community, and the concerns of the neighbors, the Board voted to allow weekday operation from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m., two hours less each day than PDS had requested. PDS Attorney Christopher Baker said this suggestion would be acceptable to the school.

The Planning Board will allow the rink to open at 6 a.m. and close at 11 p.m., but no ice time may be rented between 6 and 7 and between 10 and 11. The time is to be used for preparation and changing.

The Board also stated that weekend traffic and all weekday traffic after 8 p.m. must use the main entrance, off The Great Road. During these times, the entrance on The Old Great Road would be barricaded.

As for months of operation, the rink will be permitted to be open from October 1 through April 15. But use in April will be limited to five hours a day and must end at 8 p.m. weekdays and 6 pm. weekends.

The Board also agreed that the four-week summer program must be under the aegis of PDS.

The Board stated that PDS officials must return in two years to go over the rink's use for non-ice events. It also asked for a review in a year to see if the October schedule should be limited. "We really don't know what the implications are as to noise," said Ms. Marchand.

The regulations were approved by all members of the Planning Board with the exception of Mark Freda and Alyce Bush.

School Board

Dr. Swirsky said this week that he was still collecting information on how many school districts statewide televised their meetings and what kind of response they had received. He promised a report on September 23.

Bucky Hayes, chair of an ad hoc committee on board relationships, said the committee had met several times over the summer and would like to propose a change in the structure of board meetings to make them more effective.

The board, he said, should hold two types of meeting each month. One type, he described as "thematic." The other, he said, would be a regular business meeting to attend to "necessary" matters.

"The subject of board relationships and protocol is a very thorny topic," Mr. Hayes added. "The way we meet now, we have few questions and only very modest debates on issues."

Member Gina Kolata said she felt one reason debate was limited is that meetings continued for so long, it was an "imposition" to ask questions or prolong deliberations in any way. (Typical meetings are at least three to four hours long.)

Mr. Hayes noted also that small board committees "work better" than the board as a whole and suggested that more business be transacted in "closed session" committee meetings and then reported to the entire body.

Another recommendation of the ad hoc group was that a single individual be designated to communicate with the media on the board's behalf.

Thematic Meetings

Both President Marrero and Vice President Littman were quick to point out that the board must remain in compliance with the Open Public Meetings Act.

"I agree with the thematic approach," said Mr. Littman, "but I am concerned also that policy discussions take place in the open."

Therese Flaherty, a member of the ad hoc committee, said she felt informal committee relationships might be construed as "secret policy-making."

Discussions should definitely be held in public, she said, adding that it was also important for board members to deal with one another in a more relaxed, informal way – as they do in committees — in order to effectively accomplish the work of the board.

Mr. Carson suggested that the September 23 meeting be devoted to setting topics for the remaining thematic meetings.

"We have too few meetings to devote only half of them to discussions of issues," objected Mr. Persons. He added that board-member presentations would be enhanced if topics were summarized, rather than discussed at length.

Dr. Bossart pointed out that she was required by law to present three reports at the second board meeting of the school year, and that the meeting of September 23 would have to accommodate them.

They are reports on quality assurance, professional development, and the annual testing report. Members requested an "executive summary" rather than a lengthy discussion.

At the meeting on September 23, also, Dr. Swirsky will provide a "brief" statement on the district's transportation and budget costs related to the Charter School opening.

It is too soon to determine whether all recommendations of the ad hoc committee will be adopted, but an effort will definitely be made to respond to the committee's suggestions, according to President Marrero. —Anne Rivera

Dow Jones CEO Peter Kann, Cleveland Lane, will receive an honorary doctorate during the 25th anniversary commencement of Thomas Edison State College, on Saturday, September 27, in the Princeton University Chapel.

Mr. Kann, a winner of the Pulitzer Prize for his coverage of the 1971 India-Pakistan War, will receive the Doctor of Humane Letters, Honoris Causa, for outstanding contributions to journalism and to the community.

A native of Princeton, Mr. Kann's interest in the newspaper business can be traced back to his assignment as a copy boy for the Princeton Packet during high school.

A graduate of Harvard University with a bachelor's degree in government, Mr. Kann started his 24-year career at Dow Jones as an intern in the San Francisco bureau of The Wall Street Journal. He served as a staff reporter in both Pittsburgh and Los Angeles.

During his years at Dow Jones, Mr. Kann has done just about everything. From 1969 through 1975, he covered the Vietnam War, as well as other events across Asia, as a roving reporter based in Hong Kong.

He served as the first publisher and editor of The Asian Wall Street Journal (1976), associate publisher of The Wall Street Journal and vice president of Dow Jones (1980), executive vice president (1985), publisher of the Journal and editorial director of Dow Jones publications (1989), and president and chief operating officer (1991).

A former chairman of the Pulitzer Prize Board, Mr. Kann is also a member of the Board of Trustees of The Asia

Membership in the College of Diplomates includes 2500 orthodontists from all over the world who have been board certified.

Dr. Lyle, with offices in Princeton and West Windsor, was named Princeton "Man of the Year" by the Princeton YMCA in 1990; he received Columbia University's Distinguished Service Award for outstanding contributions to orthodontics in June.

He has been a member of the attending staff of The Medical Center of Princeton, served on the Princeton Health Commission, and was at one time president of the YMCA and of its Executive Club.

He is a fellow in the World Federation of Orthodontists and is a member of local and national dental and orthodontic societies.

Nicole L. Abate and Laura E. Abate, daughters of Mr. and Mrs Joseph Abate of Princeton, have been named to the spring semester dean's list at Grove City College.

They are graduates of New Life Christian High School.

Carol Norris has joined The Medical Center at Princeton as director of public relations. She will be responsible for all public relations activities, including media relations, publications, special events, advertising and marketing. Ms. Norris comes to The Medical Center from St. Christopher's Hospital for Children in Philadelphia, where she had served as director of public relations since 1991. Prior to her position at St. Christopher's, she was a public relations associate at the Albert Einstein Medical Center.

New Listing

On a secluded street bordered by ageless majestic trees, this frame Contemporary mirrors the elegant simplicity of the functional design inspired by Marcel Breuer, a leading proponent of the Bauhaus school of architecture. In recent years, renovations have invited filtered light and views of a landscape of leafy softness into the house to complement its interior lines. The welcoming front door with glass side panels opens to a spacious front hall with 9' ceiling and gleaming hardwood floor. The living room, with fireplace, has a breath-catching floor-to-ceiling window wall. The picture window in the dining room looks out to the rolling sweep of Springdale golf course. An intimate den has a door to a patio and the serene garden, lush with trees and shrubs. A well-arranged kitchen, with recessed lighting and convenient pantry, opens to large laundry/mud room. Upstairs, a delightful open sitting area; the master bedroom with master bath and dressing area; and three bedrooms sharing a hall bath. In the Institute for Advanced Study neighborhood, one of Princeton's most prized. $695,000

Monthly payments are for 30-year conventional fixed rate mortgages as detailed below. Please ask about: Lower Down Payments • Lower Monthly Payments • Other Options

For purchase prices up to $268,375, monthly mortgage payments (principal + interest) quoted in our ads are to qualified buyers, based upon a 20% downpayment and a conventional 30-year fixed rate loan at 7.75% with 3 points, A.P.R. 8.07%. As an example, a $100,000 loan would mean 360 monthly payments of $716.42. For purchase prices from $268,375 to $625,000, the monthly payments are to qualified buyers based upon a 20% downpayment and calculated at 7.875% with 3 points on a "Jumbo" 30-year fixed rate mortgage with an A.P.R. of 8.20%. An example of a $500,000 loan would mean 360 monthly payments of $3,582.07. Figures herein are approximate and do not include property taxes, hazard insurance, or homeowners association dues for a condominium purchase. Interest rates quoted are as of April 2, 1997, and subject to change. Not responsible for typographical errors; while information is believed accurate, we request that the payment be validated with a mortgage provider prior to purchase.

Edge of the Woods Farm

Beyond this tree-fringed horizon
the full-speed world with its macadam and concrete,
its noisy push and shove.
But, here, for these 68 acres in East Amwell, the pace is set by a world of woods and meadows,
hills and open sky.
In one of the dressage rings near this indoor arena, the soft tattoo of a young horse's hoofbeats rises to meet the rustle of wind high in the dense woodlands. Waiting to provide shelter from the sun's summer zenith or the thunderstorms that roll with marshal beat through the valley are the nine-stall horse barn and the run-in sheds in the large pastures. This splendid land, in the heart of the Amwell Valley
Hounds Foxhunt, is the perfect setting for breeding, competing or trail riding.
And a four bedroom house on the summit of its own hill, with windowed walls commanding magnificent views, keeps watch over all.
